Allies, Nazis Get Ready for Intensified War

EXPECT MAJOR CONFLICTS TO UNFOLD SOON

London Derides Hitler Speech, Says It Betrays 'Dread of British Power.'

JIBES AT CHANCELLOR

Chamberlain Hits Secrecy on Place of Hitler's Speech; Finns Resume Red Rout.

(By United Press)

Prospects for intensified warfare in Europe mounted today as a result of a series of challenges by the leaders of belligerent governments.

Adolf Hitler, British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and French Premier Edouard Daladier all joined in a chorus of threatening speeches designed to prepare the people both for major attacks by the enemy and for attempts to seized the offensive when spring comes.

Chamberlain jibed at the precautions taken in Berlin last night to guard Adolf Hitler during the fuehrer's speech at the sports palace. He noted sarcastically that the sponsors of the luncheon he addressed did not consider it necessary to keep the place of the meeting secret as was done in Berlin.

Hitler's speech, threatening intensified warfare and proclaiming his confidence in German victory, was derided here.

"Such a shriek betrays dread of British power," said the conservative Daily Telegraph in a typical editorial. "Hitler knows, and he cannot refrain from blurting out, the uneasy knowledge that he has roused the whole world against his regime."

A competen official informant, commenting on the speech said:

"The greater part of it was devoted to arguments now worn threadbare about war being forced on Germany, and to the customary falsehoods about Germany's will for peace. Hitler seemed to begin nervously and he was on the defensive throughout. . . ."

'Rights Are Won'

Meanwhile in Berlin inspired Nazi newspapers took today as the keynote of Adolf Hitler's an-

Richland County Man Killed at Huron Junction.

The first traffic fatality of 1940 involving a Richland county resident was chalked up yesterday when Harry W. Friend, 49, of Olivesburg, was instantly killed at 1 p. m. when his car collided with a truck driven by Chester A. Smith, 27, Indianapolis, Ind., at the junction of routes 13 and 224 in Huron county.

Friend suffered a fractured skull and other injuries, according to Dr. J. D. Bradish, Huron county coroner.

With Friend was Charles Wagner, 54, of Mansfield, who suffered cuts and bruises. According to witnesses and Smith, Friend traveling south on Route 13, failed to stop for a stop sign at the intersection, and hit the right side of the tractor. Smith said he swerved in an effort to avoid the accident. He was released by the coroner following his investigation.

Friend's body was taken to the Hines and Bender funeral home at Greenwich. Highway patrolmen today were trying to locate relatives, believed to live near McClure, O.

Brotherly Mix-Up

Ben West (top) today was ruled out of the 17th district special election Feb. 6, as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for congress, on the grounds that two of his nominating petitions from Coshocton county had been originally circulated for his brother, former Congressman Charles West (bottom.) The action was taken by the Richland county election board.

FOG AND SMOKE DO A BLACKOUT

City Gropes in Early Morning Hours; Warmer Weather Due Tonight, Thursday.

Fog aided by smoke created a "black-out" in Mansfield this morning, giving the early morning sun the appearance of a harvest moon and constituting a definite hazard to traffic.

As late as 8 a. m., the downtown section of the city was so dark that motorists drove with headlights on, and visibility was considerably less than a city block.

The air was heavy with moisture as the result of a fog, which enveloped the city during the night, and brought a heavy frost in the early morning.

The fog was blamed at least for one accident near the city this morning.

While the official government thermometer, operated by Enos Sprunger on the Millsbofough road, near Mansfield, registered as low as four degrees below zero last night and

SHELVES UMW RESOLUTIONS FOR 3RD TERM

Group, Recommending Board Action, Touches Off Debate on Roosevelt Backing.

DEFER ENDORSEMENT

Union Leaders Proposed Plan of Waiting for Selecting Presidential Favorite.

BULLETIN

COLUMBUS—(AP)—The United Mine Workers of America convention today sidetracked resolutions endorsing a third term for President Roosevelt. It agreed to refer the matter to its powerful international executive committee for action.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—The United Mine Workers union resolutions committee touched off debate today by shelving 47 resolutions proposing a third term for President Roosevelt and deferring selection of a presidential favorite until later.

The committee recommended that all political matters be referred to the union's international executive board "for appropriate action and such reasonable financial support as conditions may warrant at the proper time in support of the program that may be agreed upon and worked out in co-operation with labor's nonpartisan league."

The resolution reflected a strong desire to continue co-operation with the Democratic party, although it asserted that "the New Deal social and economic program of the present Democratic administration has not been consummated." It blamed this, in part, upon "a coalition clique" during Mr. Roosevelt's second administration.

The resolution praised the Roosevelt administration for the "headway" made from 1933 to 1937.

"We believe that the action of the (union's executive) board should be predicated on the basis of the (Democratic) party being united on liberal candidates, on liberal principles of a liberal platform for the consummation of the New Deal legislative program and for the liberal administration of that program; and united with labor on the basis of recognition

DRAFTS BUDGET

Cleveland to Ask 6 Millions for Relief; $600,000 Cut.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—Fred W. Ramsey, city welfare director, today set up a $6,000,000 relief budget for 1940, a slash of $600,000 from last year's expenditures.

In recommending the outlay, Mayor Harold H. Burton explained the figures was half a million less than estimated needs. He said the city was following Gov. John W. Bricker's suggestion that improved business conditions should make it possible to cut proposed costs.

The mayor said the program would not involve reductions in relief standards, but would mean a tightening of control over expenditures and allocation of definite monthly amounts.

Mayor Burton added little of the $6,000,000 was in sight.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The late Senator William E. Borah of Idaho left to his widow an estate of approximately $200,000, almost all of it in government bonds.

This was disclosed today by Mrs. Borah who said the bequest was discovered in the senator's safe reposit box when it was opened by Miss Grace Heilman, his personal secretary for many years, to obtain his will.

The will was written by hand on paper from a senate tablet. It left "everything I have to my beloved Mary."

Legion to Bring Americanism Chief For Talk Feb. 20

Homer L. Chaillaux, national Americanism director of the American Legion, who spoke in Mansfield three years ago, will be the speaker at a mass meeting at the Madison theater on Tuesday, Feb. 20, arranged by McVey Post, American Legion.

Chaillaux, a Hoosier by birth and a Californian by adoption, is said to be one of the best informed men in America on the activities of subversive groups in this country and has been in constant touch with the Dies investigating committee, an investigation that was launched at the demand of the American Legion.

Kent Oberlin, chairman of the program and arrangements committee, has asked heads of a number of Mansfield organizations, service clubs, patriotic organizations, Catholic and Protestant churches, to meet with him next Friday night at the Legion home, as a preliminary to the Chaillaux mass meeting.

Columbus Trainmen Die as 2 Freight Cars Telescope.

URBANA—(AP)—Two men were killed early today when two cars telescoped on a Pennsylvania railroad wreck train near Woodstock, 11 miles east. Two others were injured.

N. F. Layman, wreck master, and H. L. McMorrow, a laborer, were killed while sleeping in a bunk car. Samuel W. Whitt was hurt seriously and taken to White Cross hospital in Columbus, where the three lived.

Six other men in the bunk car were shaken up when it telescoped a tool-laden car after a broken draw bar split the train, stopping the front section suddenly.

Traffic on the line was tied up about five hours.

BOARD FINDS TWO PETITIONS WERE INVALID

Acts on Affidavits They Were Circulated for Brother in Coshocton County.

CUTS FIELD DOWN TO NINE

One List Shows Erasure of Name of Candidate, Board Discovers.

Ben West, Mt. Vernon coal dealer, one of the seven Democratic candidates for the 17th district short term nomination, was eliminated from the primary race today when the Richland county board of elections declared two of his petitions invalid.

West failed to qualify for the special primary Feb. 6 after investigation disclosed that 87 of the 143 signatures on his petitions were not properly obtained.

The action was taken this morning after two affidavits were presented from Coshocton county which said the petitions were circulated under the name of West's brother, former representative from the district, Charles West.

Cuts Field to Nine.

The elimination of West from the primary reduces the field of candidates to nine. Three Republicans and six Democrats are seeking party nominations.

George C. Balliet, chairman of the board, said the two affidavits were received from the Coshocton county board of election early today.

They were signed by E. J. Wilson and William Ehrich, both of whom claimed they had circulated the petitions designating Charles West as the prospective candidate. Wilson's petitions had 65 signatures and Ehrich's 22 signers.

Wilson charged that the petition he circulated originally bore the name of Charles West and that the signatures were obtained on representation that the signers were signing a petition for him.

The affidavit said that between the time the petition was delivered to "Mr. McConnell" in Columbus and its return to the Coshocton board of elections, the name of Charles West had been erased and the name of Ben West inserted.

Election board officials here said the petitions showed an erasure but declined further comment.

Ehrich's affidavit also said that signatures were obtained for Charles West and that "someone without authority" filled in the name of Best West on the petition which was blank when given to him by "Mr. McConnell" of Columbus.

McConnell was described in the

That is the order that the program committee of the Mansfield Public Parks association has to fill within the next two weeks.

Edward Wyllies, chairman of the committee, is seeking talent for their "Rollin' Rhythm" show which will be staged at the Senior high school audortium Feb. 22 and 23 to raise money for the Community Fourth of July celebration this year.

The show will be a minstrel revue and a hundred singers, dancers, comedians and a hillbilly band are needed. Wyllies said the first meeting of talent would be held at 7:30 p. m. The producing company will supply all costumes, scenery and music. Persons who want to take part in the show may call Wyllies in the evening at Canal 2817 or report at the Hogan studio Monday night.

Dancers Pour $1,500,000 Into U. S. Paralysis Fund

Hundreds of Thousands Attend President's Birthday Balls Throughout Nation; Film Stars Help.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The nation-wide celebration of President Roosevelt's birthday was expected today to provide $1,500,000 for the fund to fight infantile paralysis.

Hundreds of thousands danced last night "so that others might walk" at thousands of birthday balls in honor of the president's 58th birthday. The festivities were climaxed shortly before midnight when Mr. Roosevelt, in a five-minute "thank you, and God bless you" radio message to the dancers and to the nation, expressed appreciation for the contributions at the balls and to the "mile of dimes" campaign.

Mr. Roosevelt said that he hoped the goal of the annual celebrations eventually would be "the care of all crippled children, no matter what the cause of their crippling."

"No nation in the world has ever put a larger volunteer army into the field than the army of Americans which tonight is taking part in the defense of American childhood," he said.

While the president spent a quiet evening at the White House with a group of old friends, his wife and 18 motion picture, radio and stage stars were the center of attraction at the six major balls held in Washington hotels. A few moments after the president's speech, Mrs. Roosevelt cut the first slice of her husband's four-decker, 312-pound, red, white and blue birthday cake at the Mayflower hotel.

Approximately 15,000 Washingtonians attended the local balls and many of them followed the celebrities from one hotel to another as they made the rounds for personal appearances.

CHOOSE SLATE

Republican Central Committee Acts, McFarland Present.

Earl A. McFarland, 17th district central committeeman, was in Columbus today attending a meeting of the Republican state central committee which was to select formally the slate of Ohio's delegates-at-large to the G. O. P. national convention, which will be pledged to U. S. Senator Robert A. Taft of Cincinnati.

In addition, the committee was to pick a "second choice" with Judge Charles W. Montgomery of Newark, of the Fifth district court of appeals which includes Richland county, considered almost certain to gain the honor.

Eight delegates-at-large and eight alternates-at-large were to be chosen. Dispatches from Columbus said Gov. John W. Bricker is expected to be listed as a delegate-at-large as is former Gov. Myers Y. Cooper, of Cincinnati.

'Magic Man' Who Did Vanishing Act Held for Grand Jurors

Roscoe Kauffman, 42, of Elyria, the self-termed "Magic Man," who allegedly worked a Halloween hoax on Bellville merchants that cost them $15 last October, was in the Richland county jail today, awaiting grand jury action Thursday.

Kaufman was returned here yesterday afternoon from Wooster by Sheriff E. P. Long after the "magician" completed a 60-day sentence in the Wayne county jail, accused of pulling the same hoax there.

Prosecutor G. W. Marriott will ask the grand jury to indict him on a charge of obtaining money under false pretense.

Sheriff Long said Kauffman collected $15 from 19 Bellville merchants for a Halloween show and then disappeared without giving the performance. A large crowd of children went to the school auditorium to see the performance. Merchants paid him for tickets which were distributed free to school children.

Kauffman also faces charges of fraud at Kenton and Crestline and is wanted in Lorain county on a charge of failure to provide for two minor children.

Sheriff Long has Kauffman's "magic book" listing the Bellville merchants and a number of others in northern Ohio villages where he allegedly worked his tricks of "magic" before the officers caught up with him.

Cast of Four Keeps Interest At High Point In 'On Approval'

By KEN WOODMAN

In a doubly difficult assignment the Community Players did doubly well last night with their presentation of Frederic Lonsdale's comedy, "On Approval," before an audience of 600 at the high school auditorium.

Only four people appeared in the cast. These four, Joy Berno, Corinne Schettler, John Catlett and Herbert Schettler gave early evidence that they could surmount the first difficulty—the threat of monotony in a show with so few players.

From her first line, Mrs. Berno revealed an ability that many veteran actors could be proud of. She spoke every syllable distinctly yet naturally, an important item in a play which was almost purely a conversation piece.

In fact, the play itself amounts to little more than a compilation of the best tricks from the catalog of drawing room comedy.

It gives the players no gadgets to heighten suspense and very little action to give the play pace. From the blunt angle of keeping the audience interested it is the most difficult type of play to produce successfully.

Yet last night's performance found the audience alert and amused at every turn of the plot and spontaneous with applause at the close of several deftly handled scenes.

As the nasty, wealthy widow of the piece, Corinne Schettler turned

Happiness Chart for Marriage

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

If you're getting ready for an early marriage, because that impetuous lover of yours simply won't wait another six months, you've probably made all the usual preparations.

Clothes? Oh, you've never even dreamed of having so many. And all designed to please one lucky man.

Housekeeping outfit? The family have seen to that. They have to.

But frocks and saucepans aren't the whole of marriage. How about a Happiness Chart? Have you consulted one?

Perhaps you've never even heard of this scheme for determining the future happiness of bridal couples. Two university professors have spent six years in studying more than five hundred marriages. They believe they've discovered just what qualities in a bride and bridegroom,, just what conditions in their early histories, are most favorable to success in marriage. The results have been tabulated and published in one of the women's magazines. These constitute a Happiness Chart, and all you have to do is consult it.

"But we love each other!" you will probably say. "Jim adores me and I simply idolize him. Our marriage is certain to be a heaven on earth. We can't conceive of anything but perfect bliss from the moment we leave the church door and belong to each other forever. What can anyone know about us who has never even seen us? And with happiness itself within our reach, why in the world should we consult a chart?"

Well, my dears, love is necessary to a perfect marriage. Love is something there can't be too much of. To me, nothing is so sweet, so profoundly moving, as young lovers' belief in each other. I'm the last person in the world to belittle love.

But it's true, nevertheless, that most happy marriages do depend in part on other elements besides love. Shall I give you a hint of one or two of them?

According to the professors' chart, it helps a great deal to have had happily married parents. And that's easy to believe. To have had plenty of brothers and sisters helps also. In such families one doesn't get spoiled.

Long engagements are safer than short. The lovers have a chance to prove their faithfulness, and the fact that they know their own minds. Regular incomes, however small, are safer than variable ones. Easier on the nerves, we all know that.

But here is something you might not expect. Among desirable professions for a husband, that of chemical engineer ranks highest. An engineer, it seems, is practically certain to make home happy. And so is a clergyman. As for traveling salesmen, it isn't perhaps entirely a surprise that they rank low.

To my mind, the reason for considering such facts as these is that it's never too late to fortify a weak spot in one's marriage. So far as you can, you should repair the holes in your marital equipments, as you would repair the defects in your house. Keep on believing in love. It's the greatest thing in the world. But give love a chance!

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"In that case," he said, "I think my cue is immediate departure. But I shall have to come back to hear Olina play those harps after their arrival. Do you suppose, if you can secure a nap in the meantime, that you will be able to have her go through the bit of the role you will have written for her? I understood you to say it would be most unwise, I think, to trust an amateur with more, and I am counting on your drilling to make her rendition fool-proof."

"I think it can be," I said confidently. "She will be seated at her harp during the entire scene, so there will be no gestures or walking about the stage to consider. And the few words she will speak will be commonplace ones, calling for nothing special in the way of histrionicism. I am sure she will manage it very nicely, especially as she is used to public appearances."

"That is very reassuring," he said. "But you have not told me at what time you will be able to have me return."

I made a swift mental calculation. I wanted to put Mary through a final rehearsal of her role as she and I had planned the rendition which was so to surprise Philip Veritzen. But I did not wish to be hurried in it, so I must postpone it until after his call This entailed, of course, getting his first visit over as soon as possible, and I framed my answer accordingly.

"I will make my nap a brief one this morning," I said, "and take a longer one this afternoon. In that way, I can plan to have you come over as soon as the harps arrive. In the meantime, I will write Olina's role, and drill her in it, so that you will be able to judge the whole effect. I will telephone you as soon as the harps arrive. Then by the time you get here — I would suggest a half hour's interval before you start— Olina will have been able to choose her harp, and everything will be in place for her rehearsal."

"The plan does justice to your efficiency," he said, bowing from the waist. "And I will go at once, if you will permit me. Please promise me to go back to sleep immediately."

"I promise." I told him, making a "mental reservation" as to the time of the nap He was scarcely out of the front door before Lillian emerged from my room and literally dragged me back to it, where I found Mary waiting.

"I sneaked in," she said, eyes shining with excitement, "when his back was turned, and he never saw me. Now, for the love of Allah and all his prophets, spill us the dope! Aunt Lillian and I are going to be just scraps from the consuming fire of curiosity if you don't come across."

I told them all I knew about Olina's part in the play

"You think that's all," Mary repeated in an awed tone. "Ye gods and assorted little fishes! You've got a program there for a superwoman Do you think—" she hesitated, then brought out the supreme sacrifice—"that you'll need to rehearse me today? You said the last time you rehearsed me that I would do"

"And so you would, my dear," I said, smiling at her, "should some unforeseen emergency arise to prevent your rehearsal. But my program this morning distinctly is not such an emergency. I shall have time for a good nap today, and I want you to go back to your room now and get the sleep which I interrupted so that you could inveigle Olina to the tennis court."

A knock sounded on the door. Olina's distinctive one, and we looked at each other in consternation. Had she heard what I had said?

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, February 1.

An active and interesting day, with personal engagements dominating the activities, is read from the predominant planetary configurations. The accent seems to be on social, domestic and affectional affairs or those business interests involved in catering to such happy functions. All artistic pursuits are under good auspices, and the mystical or psychological expressions of creative talents find splendid stimulus under this rule. However, in connection with all such idealistic experiences, there may be sudden and surprising disruptions.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of extremely lively experiences in social, domestic, artistic or emotional activities. A mystical or intuitional element may be involved. There may be a unique original or modernistic expression in poetry, music or art. Romance may be absorbing and cause sudden or entangling upheavals or changes.

A child born on this day may be splendidly endowed with all the social, emotional, artistic and romantic graces and talents, and have a gentle, genial and sympathetic nature. It may also have strong intuitions or some form of mystical or subtle creative depths, perhaps in poetry or music.

Loneliness Undermines Youngster

BY GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, PH. D.

If my readers were to share with me all the letters and verbal accounts I get from parents and youths about the sufferings from timidity and loneliness of those whose parents would not let them, especially in early childhood, play with other children, for fear these other children might contaminate their morals, practically none would arrive at the conclusion of the mother who wrote the following:

"Dear Dr. Myers: Our only child is a girl of three and a half years. She has played alone perfectly, except for about one month last summer when I thought she might be weary playing alone. But that one trial convinced me that she was being shown anything but lady-like things from one or two other little girls her own age that I had previously thought to be very well behaved children.

"Since the depression our neighborhood has been anything but the best, although we are more or less compelled to stay, and since Baby gets on so well by herself at play, I do not let any other children come to play with her or let her play with them. Consequently, she is much older than three and a half; as a matter of fact, the questions she asks and the manner in which she answers show us clearly that she is very smart . . .

"The point is, people are inclined to think I am making her snobbish. This is untrue, but I have taken care not to let her mingle with other children that are not absolutely clean and well-mannered. It would make me a nervous wreck watching to see that they did not get too close, etc. . . .

"Would you advise me to continue the way I have been doing or could you give me any suggestions?"

How I answered this mother:

"I can see how you have reasoned and how eager you are to protect your fine little girl. But you have overlooked the fact that your daughter will eventually go out into a real world and mingle with all sorts of people. Even after a few years you won't be able to shelter her nearly all the while no matter how hard you try.

Personal Suffering.

"You also have failed to realize the amount of personal suffering in terms of timidity and loneliness (feeling of inferiority) this child will experience as she grows older, if she continues to keep away from other children of her age. Perhaps the only way for a child to learn to be likable and to be happy and comfortable among others of his age, especially in the teens, is by mingling rather freely with numerous other children in the free-for-all, rough-and-tumble of the neighborhood.

"Let me entreat you to attract a few children her age to your home and have them play where you can see them; also to encourage your little daughter to play out-of-doors in safe places. You need not be much concerned about what she will hear since you have her complete confidence and answer all her questions. Your love and wise guidance can easily armor her against such hazards."

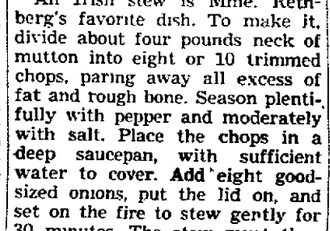
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

NOT GOOD DEFENSIVELY

HANDS WHICH richly justify an overcall do not necessarily have good defensive value, even if the holder was vulnerable at the time he made his bid. His hand may contain high cards which are called "defensive values" in all-purpose tables, but those values may shrink out of all proportion when the hand of the declarer or his partner has extreme distribution. If you hear the original bidder's partner jump immediately to game in the original suit, after hearing the overcall, it is almost certain he is short in the opponent's suit, probably with no more than a singleton and maybe not that.



(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

West's hand on this deal certainly constitutes a sound vulnerable overcall of 2-Hearts over South's 1-Spade When North jumped at once then to 4-Spades, he advertised the type of hand he held for all to hear Came then South's 4-No Trumps (Blackwood), North's 5-Diamonds, showing one ace, and South's 6-Spades.

This passed around to East, who doubled. South was Alfred E. Haeussler, who knew East as a player given to psychics, calls which he believes may mislead a declarer in the play, and "intuitive" doubles—or something. So he redoubled enthusiastically. Later East explained that he thought the double would make South play him for strength he did not have, and so enable his partner to beat the contract.

That bright idea cost his side 910 points. The heart A was led and trumped, two others of South's hearts ruffed, and the diamond Q discarded on clubs, making an overtrick. So besides the rubber bonus, the side got 1870 points when it made the redoubled contract instead of the 960 it would have produced if not doubled.

What is the best bidding of this deal?

Food Always Subject of Conversation

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

ONE SUBJECT of conversation that continues with unflagging zest at all times is food and its preparation. More than once what we have thought to be a solemn conversation on world affairs between important persons has turned out to be an argument as to the relative excellence of a restaurant or a dish. We have found that career women and musicians are most enthusiastic and always have the best recipes.

One of our favorite food experts is the talented Elizabeth Rethberg opera singer.

At all of Mme. Rethberg's meals, a salad consisting of chopped vegetables—carrots, green peppers, lettuce, tomatoes and fresh peas—is served.

An Irish stew is Mme. Rethberg's favorite dish. To make it, divide about four pounds neck of mutton into eight or 10 trimmed chops, paring away all excess of fat and rough bone. Season plentifully with pepper and moderately with salt. Place the chops in a deep saucepan, with sufficient water to cover. Add eight good-sized onions, put the lid on, and set on the fire to stew gently for 30 minutes. The stew must then be removed from the fire, the liquor poured into a bowl, and after being freed from ALL fat (this is essential), is poured back on the chops. Add a dozen peeled potatoes and a pint of good stock or gravy, or a like quantity of water. Boil gently for about 45 minutes. To serve, put the potatoes in the center of the dish, arrange the cutlets neatly around them and pour the sauce and onions over all. Serve very hot.

Apple Sauce.

Apple sauce is made in a different way in the Rethberg household. It's used as a main dish embellishment and as a dessert, with cream. To every pound of apples, allow two tablespoons of butter, and not quite a tablespoon of water. Peel, core and slice the apples, put in a saucepan with the other ingredients and simmer till tender.

An American version of that old English dish, mince pie, is another favorite dish with the singer. Make a mixture of finely-chopped suet, currants, raisins, stoned and quartered, also peeled and cored chopped apples, powdered sugar, one-half pound sultana raisins, four ounces mixed candied peel, finely shredded, one lemon, a little cinnamon, mace and grated nutmeg. The lemon should be pared and the rind boiled until tender, then rubbed through a sieve and mixed in a bowl with all the other ingredients. Put in a jar with an air-tight lid and let stand several days before using, to assure best results.

MUSTEROLE

Posture Important Today

By MME. QUI VIVE

If it can be said of a girl that "she moves a goddess and she looks a queen" she will have no anatomical defects to worry about. The regal carriage is what gives her manner, makes her distinguished of appearance, and transforms the little bargain frock into a stunning garment. It's not what you wear, but how you wear it. The woman who holds herself beautifully can don a kitchen apron and look as slick as butter, while the one whose tummy plops out and whose chest plops in won't look like two cents in the grandest model that ever sailed over the seas from Paris.

We may be a traitor to the sisterhood but it is our humble opinion that this is an era of chiffon backbones and slouchy carriage. Perhaps the new nipped-in waistline and corsets that are boned a bit will inspire women to correct defects of posture that are common among all ages.

It is a crying shame that young girls of school age think it is too cute for words to look sloppy. See them sitting at the soda fountain Pretty legs twisted around the stools, shoulders forward, chest contracted. When walking they lope or huddle up into the shoulders One wonders if those lithe pretty young bodies are ever stretched tall so muscles have to work. In the future years they'll be sorry. They won't have as good figures as their mothers have now. And let it be said, to be fair, that the mothers don't carry themselves as well as their grandmothers did at their age. In grannie's day there was elegance of manner and deportment. The queenly pose was drummed into heads of the girls and if they didn't carry themselves properly they got a good healthy wrack.

Concentrate on your backbone, no matter what kind of a figure you have. Keep it on the job. Standing, sitting and walking with the backbone extended full length —no kinks in it—will alone fight off fat cells and keep muscles resilient. We can't say too much about this. Get mad, if you must, you little slouchers, but we're telling you heaven's truth. If your posture isn't good you will ruin your figure.

BORAH MIGHT HAVE AVERTED NEW CONFLICT

Writer Says Senator Planned to Discuss World Affairs With Nazi Chancellor.

(Editor's Note — The strange combination of events which prevented the late Senator Borah from having a conference with Chancellor Adolf Hitler in Germany is revealed in the following article, the tenth in a series on Borah by William K. Hutchinson — International News Service.)

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

WASHINGTON — The second World war, now aflame in Europe, might have been averted if William Edgar Borah had not given a quiet promise to an old friend in the state department.

It was a promise made to consult Secretary of State Cordell Hull before accepting a personal invitation from Chancellor Adolf Hitler to visit Germany as the guest of the German government late in 1938. The promise kept Borah from reaching a decision until mid-February of 1939, after which world events and his death conspired to keep him forever on American soil.

Borah received the invitation from Hitler on Nov. 28. It was arranged by Kurt Sell, Washington correspondent of the German News Agency, and myself, after Borah expressed a wish to visit Germany if he could confer personally with Hitler. He hoped to intervene with Hitler to secure concessions for the Jews of greater Germany but he also proposed to discuss all current and world affairs with the German chancellor.

The day after I informed Borah by telephone of the invitation, I visited him at his office. We discussed his going and he instantly declared he would have to consult the state department. I urged him to go without such a consultation, arguing he would travel only as a private citizen. He replied

"No, the department might easily destroy all value of my visit to the chancellor by shooting at me from home while I am abroad. They might arouse the country against me as an interfering meddler, who was going over the head of his own government. I will go if the attitude of the state department is either friendly or aloof to it."

Then, with deep emotion, he added:

"I must take my chances anyway of being a complete failure and achieving nothing. I would have to live with that the rest of my life—if I failed."

Finally, he told me—I copied it carefully, read it back to him and he approved it—to send this message to the German embassy:

"I have received your invitation. I am deeply appreciative and surprised. I must think matters over for a few days and take into consideration the attitude of our state department. So hold up action for the present.

"As to the question of expenses they are overly generous and I ask permission to take care of that myself."

I thereupon explained to Borah that it had been my own idea to have the German government offer him transportation, as I did not wish him to reject the invitation because he could not afford to spend $2,000 or $3,000 on the visit. He replied:

"It certainly will be an effort to get that money, but I can. I much prefer to travel on such a visit at my own expense."

We talked for some while, with Borah repeatedly saying:

"I wish I knew more about Hitler or some one who knows him intimately."

I urged him to reach a quick decision, expressing the opinion that the swift invitation from Hitler might indicate the German chancellor was ready to make some Jewish concessions.

"Now, now, there need be no haste," was his retort. "I want time to think and I must consult the department. I'll go see Judge Moore."

(Editor's note: Secretary Hull, at the time, was in Lima, Peru, attending the Pan-American conference. Moore is R. Walton Moore, counsellor of the state department.)

Later that afternoon, I transmitted Borah's reply to sell. He asked me whether I had impressed on Borah that the invitation had come from Hitler and not just from the German foreign office. I replied I had.

The next day, Borah told me he had visited his doctors at Johns Hopkins hospital in Baltimore for a general check-up on his health. He added, with a smile:

"The doctors say I can go."

I asked him,

"Well, do you still want to see Hitler?"

"Of course," he replied. "No one wants to go more than I do but it's just as much to his benefit as mine that I am not discredited by my own government when I do go."

On Saturday, December 3, Borah gave the quiet promise that was to keep him from ever seeing Hitler. He gave it to his old friend Judge Moore, in a conference at the state department. It was that he would not visit Hitler without first conferring with Secretary of State Hull. Its momentous effect is lost in the realm of speculation.

Posterity may judge what might have followed a conference between Hitler, the "man of the hour" in Europe, leader of a reborn, rearmed Germany, conqueror of Austria, master of Czechoslovakia, then on his road to Poland and a second world war;—and Borah, America's master statesman, world-eminent foe of the Versailles treaty, champion of the inarticulate masses, whose voice could make chancelleries tremble.

Permanent settlement of the Jewish question? Permanent peace in Europe? Let historians say.

The following Monday, Borah told me of his promise to Moore. He would await Hull's return from the Lima conference before reaching a decision on Hitler's invitation.

The neutrality fight loomed throughout the session of congress, but finally was postponed. Then Borah became ill and went to Maine to recuperate. Congress quit August 5. At no time did Borah get a chance to leave the country. In mid-August, the United States began evacuating Americans from European ports.

On September 1, German troops moved into Poland. On September 3, Great Britain and France declared they were at war with Germany.

And only the other day, as we talked of war-torn Europe—in words that ran like a prayer—Borah said to me,

"Lord, if I could only have talked to Hitler—all this might have been averted."

(Tomorrow—Borah's Private Views on Hitler.)

HEARS METCALF APPEAL HERE

State Civil Service Board to Convene at Courthouse Tomorrow.

Mrs. Edith Metcalf, Mansfield, dismissed last October as a state sales tax examiner, will take her appeal from the dismissal before the state civil service commission at a hearing Thursday at the Richland county courthouse.

She denied the charges. Her defense will be presented tomorrow by Attys. Lewis Brucker of Mansfield and W. S. Pealer, Columbus. The hearing will open at 10 a. m.

Mrs. Metcalf received a civil service appointment to the tax job in February, 1935, while Martin L. Davey was governor. She was among a number of Democratic appointees who were discharged under the Republican state administration.

Members of the civil service commission who will conduct the hearing are Gertrude Jones, chairman; Carl W. Smith, and Frank W. Forsythe.

House Showdown on Farm Appropriation Due Tomorrow

FRIENDS AND FOES SET FOR FINISH FIGHT

Leaders Predict Most of 154 Million Reduction Will Be Oked by Chamber.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — The congressional farm bloc and economy advocates today prepared for a finish fight on the agricultural appropriation bill which has been cut $154,530,263 below President Roosevelt's 1941 "bed rock" budget. The showdown comes Thursday when final house action is expected.

The bill, carrying appropriations of $634,399,260, was reported to the house yesterday by its appropriations committee. Consideration began immediately with house leaders predicting that most of the reductions would be sustained.

Farm enthusiasts in both houses were enraged at the drastic reductions and charged that the savings bloc was practicing its economy "on the farmers' hides."

House farm leaders conceded that the committee's elimination of $72,678,812 in funds for the surplus commodities corporation, which involves the New Deal's food stamp plan, could not be replaced. They planned, however, to conduct a strenuous campaign to reinstate the following items:

1. $47,975,000 for payments under the 1937 Sugar act.
2. $25,000,000 for farm tenant loans.
3. $1,000,000 for soil conservation.
4. $500,000 for development of waterway facilities in arid and semi-arid regions.

No Parity Payments.

The committee made no provisions for farm parity payments over which the president and congress have been feuding for two years. Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace had urged that $212,000,000 be provided for that purpose.

The farm bloc, facing possible defeat on the parity payment isue, plans to let the senate provide for such funds and then battle to retain them when the measure returns to the house.

If the reductions are sustained, savings made by the house to date in the president's budget would total $302,000,000. Mr. Roosevelt contended in his budget message that if congress stayed within his estimates and imposed new taxes the expanded national defense program, it would be unnecessary to raise the statutory $45,000,000,000 debt limit. Congressional leaders are seeking to chip enough from supply bills and the national defense program, and, possibly the relief bill, to make new taxes unnecessary.

Childbirth From Artificial Means Urged Upon Nazis

BERLIN — (AP) — Artificial insemination to insure sons for the Fatherland is urged on childless couples of the Schwarze Korps, official weekly publication of Henrich Himmler's black-uniformed Schutzstaffel, the little guard of Nazidom.

"In cases where incurable inability to beget progeny on the part of the husband has as a counterpart the perfect health of the wife," the publication said, "artificial means may offer a saving way out."

"The problem, then, is that of finding a helper toward procreation—somebody who must be of high caliber as regards both health and character and who will place his hereditary substance at disposal.

"Artificial transplantation will be done by a physician."

The weekly suggests that brothers of impotent husbands be chosen for the purpose, where possible.

Up and Down THE STREET

Backstage at the Community Player's show in the high school auditorium last night the director and members of the stage crew were looking over the program to make sure their names had been spelled correctly and that everyone had been given due credit. Running his index finger down the list Harold McCuen, who designed the sets, snorted "Humph! What a way to spell Norman Bel Geddes." "Yeah," yeahed the director, "and g-o-o-d-e-n-o-u-g-h doesn't spell Guthrie McClintic, either."

You can imagine the trouble a radio announcer would have had last night attempting to describe the Mansfield-Ashland basketball game in Ashland due to the similarity of names. There was a Beer, a Bear and a Barr in the starting lineup. Russ Beer is a Tyger and Tom Bear and Vince Barr are Ashland players. Beer and Bear opposed each other at center. Ashland won the ball game, 32 to 27.

THREATEN TO SNAG SEAWAY

Senators Tell Roosevelt New St. Lawrence Pact Headed for Trouble.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Ratification of a proposed treaty between Canada and the United States for construction of a St. Lawrence river seaway appeared likely today to run into a congressional snag.

As representatives of Canada and the United States prepared to approve the treaty—possibly within 48 hours—there were signs in congress that the pact, which succeeds one the senate refused to ratify six years ago, is headed for trouble.

Sen. Scott Lucas D., Ill., and his colleague, Sen. James Slattery, D., Ill., have notified President Roosevelt that they would oppose any treaty that would limit the flow from Lake Michigan into the Illinois valley at 1,500 feet a second.

State department attaches have not disclosed the terms of the new agreement on the seaway, which has encountered vigorous opposition from coastal shipping interest, but the previous treaty proposed to fix diversion of Lake Michigan waters at the 1,500 foot rate, which many inland waterways advocates believe to be less than one-third of the flow needed.

Sen. Edwin C. Johnson, D., Colo., said he would oppose ratification on the grounds that the new seaway would harm American railroads, already in an unattractive financial position.

More than half of the 42 senators who voted against the 1934 treaty are still in congress.

LAWMAKER HITS LETTERS READ TO CONGRESS

Claims They Were Documents Forged to Make Attack on Probe Chairman.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—A widespread plot to "ruin" Chairman Martin Dies, of the house Dies committee, was charged today by Rep. Joe Starnes (D.) of Alabama, after the committee bared a report containing testimony that letters had been forged in an attack on Dies.

The committee planned to delve further into the alleged forgery by questioning Gardner Jackson, legislative representative of labor's non-partisan league, and Harold Weisberg, a former investigator for the senate civil liberties committee.

"There is no doubt but that there is a widespread plot to ruin Dies and discredit the committee, said Starnes. "I have encountered it outside of Washington and have seen evidence of its working in several cities."

The committee announced that David Mayne, one-time Washington representative of William Dudley Pelley, leader of the "Silver Shirts," had testified in secret session that he sold forged documents to Weisberg.

Used For Attack.

These documents, Mayne said, were among those used by Rep. Frank E. Hook, (D.) of Michigan, in an attack on Dies on the floor of the house in which he sought to link Dies with the "Christian front" and also with Pelley.

Hook read extracts from letters purported to have been written by Pelley—now being sought by the committee—intimating that he had been assured that Dies would "lay off" him and his cohorts.

Mayne testified, the committee said, that he sold these forged letters to Weisberg for $100 and the promise that Jackson would get him a job in the department of agriculture.

The committee said that Mayne identified Weisberg as a former employe of the senate civil liberties committee, who was dismissed for giving advance information to the Communists Daily Worker. Mayne testified that he was told Weisberg "works under Jackson."

FAIR ENOUGH!

Revealing Inside Story Of How Columnist Gets Foreign Affairs Material

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—I suppose some people have been wondering where I learn so much about the military situation in the Far East.

What I do is listen to speeches at luncheons, read books and magazines and newspaper articles and talk up the subject among my friends. This scares the hell out of me, and I write a piece about it so that other people can help me fret. You might call it my share-the-worry plan.

It is the same about the military situation in Europe, but my information is strictly first class, because it is compounded of all the best thoughts and fears on this subject. The facts are simple and well established, and most of the professional authorities use the same major premises but, for variety and what you might call customer appeal, approach the discussion first from one angle, then from another—the Mediterranean today, for example, then the Baltic and so forth.

Any one who wants to become an authority may do so by listening to a few lectures, reading a few essays bearing such titles as Whither French-Indo China? or What Price Italo-Balkan Isolationism? interviewing some officers of the army and navy, preferably retired, and provoking casual discussions with non-professional friends who have obtained their knowledge the same way.

How does a person become an acrobat? The novice will take some terrible falls in learning, but polish comes with patient practice, and I took some myself in the field of foreign policy before I became an expert.

Now, however, I am pretty good, and anybody who says I am not pretty good is low-rating not only me but some of the greatest experts in the world, because it is from them that I have learned my stuff. They are likely to be pretty wolfish, however, resenting the effrontery of any new man in hanging out his sign as an expert, and I called one of them good one day.

I expressed an opinion about something, and he gave me a look and said, "That is the most dangerous fallacy that is deluding our public today."

"That certainly is funny, coming from you," I said, "because I got it out of your book." Did that slay him!

As a general practitioner in the field of wisdom I find this phase of the work the least attractive of all, and just as some doctors turn over certain unpleasant jobs to specialists, except in emergencies, I avoid international affairs as much as I can without losing my license.

You have to do a certain number of pieces on this topic every year, or things will change so much you will find yourself going on about Hitlerism versus Bolshevism, which would be like a doctor bleeding a patient for the flu.

The reason why it is so objectionable to me is that no matter where you start, or what line you follow, you wind up with this country in the arms of the English or, more rarely, vice versa. It is the conclusion of all the expert knowledge, if you follow this knowledge to the logical conclusion, that the United States and England are interdependent, but with reservations in favor of England.

That is to say, that any war of England's is inescapably our war, because the British fleet is our defense against vanquishment and enslavement at the hands of any power which conquers England and destroys or captures the fleet. That means that any time England gets into a war this country automatically finds herself at war, too, and it gives the English the power to decide what wars we must fight in.

It either makes us a protectorate of England or England an American protectorate, and it means that we have to take England's part in protecting her loot all over the world, including countries that the English just walked in and took.

But it doesn't mean that England has to fight in our wars. England reserves freedom of action in our wars, including freedom to help our enemies—something that we nowadays wouldn't think of doing for her enemies.

It means that a free republic which had to fight England twice—first to be born and then to live—has now re-entered the empire full-grown, subject, however, to such insults, ingratitude and imposition as England would never dare offer to the countries which actually belong to her empire. For example, the English wouldn't dare treat New Zealand or Canada as she treats the United States.

There must be some better conclusion but science is slow and we experts haven't yet discovered what it is.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—If Jane Bryan really means it about giving up her career for marriage, Hollywood hasn't any real precedent to cite glibly.

There's June Travis, who was wed the other day, but June left pictures a year or two ago—an unusual step for any young girl who has had a taste of fame.

But Jane Bryan, after one big role, had the way open for bigger assignments and had arrived, virtually, at stardom. She was given a part in "Married, Pretty, and Poor" which she didn't like. She was suspended. The next Hollywood knew, she was married in Chicago, to a man whose courtship successfully evaded the gossip columns, and she was saying she was through with pictures.

There have been voluntary retirements like hers before.

Phyllis Haver chose marriage in the east to a career in Hollywood. Virginia Fox was an actress before she married Darryl Zanuck, and gave it up pronto. Dorothy Jordan quit pictures shortly after marriage to Merian Cooper, the producer, and Dixie Lee, except for a minor appearance now and then, has devoted herself strictly to the job of being Mrs. Crosby. Since Ann Harding became Mrs. Werner Janssen, a rare stage appearance has been her only activity, although her return is often rumored.

May McAvoy, one of the top leading ladies of the first talkies, hasn't made a picture in years—marriage writing finis to the career. Leatrice Joy, who came from retirement in "First Love" after 10 years off screen for marriage, still is primarily the wife and mother, the career playing second fiddle.

You don't hear much of Marian Nixon any more, but you hear a lot of Mrs. William Seiter. And if you wondered what ever happened to Leila Hyams, or Virginia Valli, or Constance Talmadge, the answer is, "They married." (Miss Talmadge recently divorced Townsend Netcher, but she quit acting to become his wife.)

There are many other former actresses who chose home firelight to studio arc-lights, but there isn't one in the lot actually comparable to the Bryan girl.

All those others forsook their careers, it is true, but most of them abandoned careers that were on the down-beat. Either they had enjoyed full years of fame and fortune on their own, or they had decided the game wasn't worth the struggle compared to romance or the peace of domesticity.

And among the younger of the lot, there wasn't one with the promise of this young Jane. There wasn't one with her sincerity, her mobility of face and expression, her sure "feeling" for acting, her eagerness to learn and to profit by tutelage.

It's romance, all right. The only approach to it for sheer poetic romance was provided some seven years ago by Edna Best. Miss Best fled Hollywood and a role opposite the then "great lover" of the movies, John Gilbert, because she couldn't bear to be separated so long from husband Herbert Marshall.

The Best-Marshall romance, of course, is currently on the rocks and shouldn't be mentioned in the same paragraph with that of a girl who's on her honeymoon.

IN THE RUHL BOOK

By OSCAR RUHL

JACK DEMPSEY knocked out Joe Louis tonight in a mythical ring battle invisioned by none other than Gene Tunney, who used to be a boxing man himself.

Gene was asked by the editors of Look magazine to put on a contest between the present heavyweight champion and Jack Dempsey in his prime. Gene obliged with a blow-by-blow description, illustrated by a running picture story made up of sketches and composite photographs.

Says Gene of the fight: "One has to go back to the Homeric contest between Ulysses and Irus, the Beggar, to find its equal. For let it be known by all that never before have two gladiators with such capacity for destruction been pitted against each other."

The fight, brief but thrilling, ended two and a half minutes after the opening bell. Louis had the better of it at the beginning and in fact succeeded in knocking the Manassa Mauler down with his deadly right—"probably the hardest punch ever seen in a ring when working right." But Jack came right back, "raining deadening rabbit blows" on the back of Joe's neck.

Then: Dempsey moved close with a left uppercut meant for the liver. Jack's blow was low. The referee cautioned Dempsey" . . . and later: "another blow landed smack on the top of Jack's head . . . Dempsey pitched forward as though hit by a club, and catching Louis around the waist, saved himself from falling. . . . As they broke, Dempsey landed with a terrific thud against Louis' jaw."

From that point the fight was all Dempsey's. Joe went down but was too dazed to take his full count of nine. When he got up, "Dempsey leaped in with another overhand right that landed behind Louis' left ear. With the landing of that blow the 'call of the wild' in Louis was silenced and the abysmal urge in Dempsey was gratified. Louis fell face down, where he was counted out."

It might have been different if Joe could have taken it as well as he could dish it out. But Gene Tunney, still literary, prefers to put it this way for Look: "Had Louis' resistance been commensurate with the force of his own blow, he would have won."

Make Fans Forget Chuckovits, Frascella.

IT WAS just a few years ago that Chuck Chuckovitz, of Toledo, and Nick Frascella, of Wooster, were staging a nip-and-tuck battle for acclamation as Ohio's greatest collegiate cagers.

After witnessing those two great forwards in action, fans were dubious whether they soon would see a similar pair of high scoring aces who also possessed comparable brilliant general floor ability.

But prancing around today with the Toledo and Ohio University fives are two sharpshooters, a sophomore and a junior, who already are making basketball enthusiasts forget the fantastic high scoring marks set by Chuckovitz and Frascella.

The gentlemen in question are Bob Gerber, Toledo's lanky first year center, and Frankie Baumholtz, flashy Bobcat forward.

Although neither this year is expected to top the staggering 449 point total hung up by Chuckovitz in his last year, Gerber and Baumholtz are currently the state's leading scorers and its anybody's race until the last game is played.

Gerber, who hails from Akron West high school, is a towering lad, stretching six feet, four inches from the hardwood. His weight, 188 pounds, is ideal for shiftiness and general floor ability. He is deadly from close in under the basket and on the onehanded "sucker" shots.

Baumholtz, chunkier than Gerber and a bit more aggressive, comes from Midvale, a village in Tuscarawas county. In high school he spent every minute of his spare time in tossing a basketball at hoops—hoops in gymnasiums and crudely constructed hoops attached to anything practical. The spare time training has stood him in good stead.

Miami Stops Earlham To Avenge Lone Loss.

(By Associated Press)

All's right with the world in Oxford, O., today. Miami's basketball team stopped Earlham last night, 43 to 35, for its ninth victory of the season against one defeat, thus cementing a grip on the Ohio collegiate lead.

The triumph was the more significant because it was the Indiana squad that handed the Redskins the lone setback, a 38 to 36 trimming Dec. 12.

Electrics, Sohioans Head Race

Westinghouse, Blue Goose Clubs Can Knock Others Out of Race Thursday.

THE Westinghouse Electrics and Blue Goose Sohioans won the first games in the second round of the City Class A league race.

Thursday night they return to action at Mansfield high school, and the results of these games will go a long ways toward deciding the second round crown.

If the Sohioans and Electrics win again Thursday, the second round race will be over except for these two clubs.

Atton

Defeats by the Blue Goose and Westinghouse quintets Thursday will throw the league battle into a four-way tie. Just what will occur is a matter of conjecture, but two of the most interesting games of the season are promised fans.

Westinghouse meets the Shelley Chocolates in the first game at 7:30 p. m. The Electrics handed the Yuncker Sports their most decisive defeat in several years two weeks ago when they won by a 37 to 20 score.

The Chocolates were defeated by the Blue Goose club, 29 to 25, and the Sohioans this week meet the Sports.

A scoring threat from nearly every section of the court, Joe Atton is expected to see considerable services with th Chocolates Thursday.

Church League Lead at Stake

First place in the Church Class A league will be temporarily decided tonight when First M. E. and Park Avenue Baptist tangle in the feature game at 8:30.

These two teams are undefeated in the second round, while Mayflower, winner of the first half, has lost one game. Mayflower faces St. Johns in the opener at 7 p. m.

Champ on Fund Card

BILLY WEIDNER . . . junior heavy king.

TIM NOLAN'S promise to feature at least one world's champion on the wrestling card to be staged at the Armory Monday night for the Finnish Relief Fund was made good today.

The promoter of the Quality club, who has been named matchmaker for the charity show, today announced the signing of Billy Weidner, junior heavyweight champion of the world.

Weidner will meet Walter Stratton of Leetonia, who defeated "Sneeze" Achieu on this week's card, in one of the main bouts on the four-match program.

Weidner is a popular performer on the Mansfield mat and has increased his following with his sensational victories over the Great Mephisto, whom he pinned on successive Mondays recently.

The Weidner-Stratton match will be a two-out-of-three-fall affair with a 90-minute time limit, Nolan stated.

Farmers Can Cinch Title

The Raemelton Farm cagers can cinch the first half championship of the Senior league at the Friendly House Thursday night.

They meet the Augustine Canfield Oils in the first game at 6:45 p. m. on the next to the final night's program in the first half. If the Farms lose, they can win the title outright on the final night next week. The worst that the Raemelton club can suffer from defeats in both of their remaining games is a tie for the crown.

The Moose Lodge meets the Isaly Dairys in the second game and the Rex Billiards and Daley Cafes clash in the other tilt.

Inmates Rally To Rip Galion

O. S. R. Makes Up Big Deficit In Second Half.

Ashland Cagers Give Retiring Coach First Win Over Tygers

Longley's Prediction Comes True as Mansfield Plays Inferior Ball to Lose, 32 to 27.

By OSCAR RUHL, News-Journal Sports Editor.

JOHN (RED) LONGLEY, Ashland high school's retiring coach, predicted that his team would whip the Tygers and they did.

But whether the A's won on their home court last night because they are a superior team or Mansfield an inferior club was a question that had not been settled up today.

The kind of basketball the ancient high school rivals played last night as the Ashlanders won by a 32 to 27 score was no credit to either team.

Mix up a little inconsistent officiating with the brand of basketball played by them last night, and you have what might be described as something of a spectacle.

Ashland did not play spectacular basketball. Coach Longley was disgusted with their play. Mentor Vern Hoffman had no laurels to hand out, either.

It was just a game between two cage clubs that were far below their usual form.

The Tygers made somewhat of a comeback to climb back into the ball game after trailing 19 to 7 at the intermission, but every time they reached a position where it appeared as though they were victory-bound something would happen.

While the officiating came in for considerable criticism from Mansfield followers, the Tygers committed enough physical and mental errors to lose the usual ball game.

Ashland literally swept the Tygers off their feet in the first half. It held an 8 to 5 lead at the end of the first period and a 19 to 7 advantage at the half, Mansfield failing to score in the second period until the last minute when Russ Beer dumped in a short shot.

The Tygers came back with a vengeance in the third frame, but cut the A's advantage only two points.

Deprived of the height of Beer, who was lost on personals, in the fourth frame, the bengal quint made a gallant comeback to come within three points of the lead on two occasions due to some nice work by Jack Shiplet and Harry Phillips.

However, on each occasion Ashland pulled away to protect its lead.

If Coach Hoffman derived any satisfaction from the defeat, it was the play of Shiplet and Phillips, the latter making his first start of the season. Shiplet led the scoring with nine points. Vince Barr was high in the Ashland scoring column with 10 points.

Even in field goals, Mansfield lost the ball game on the foul line where it converted only five out of 17 shots. Ashland converted 10 out of the same number of attempts. The personal fouls were evenly divided with 16 apiece.

Incidentally, the victory was the first scored by a Longley-coached team over Mansfield in either football or basketball. Longley will relinquish his coaching duties at the end of this school term.

* * *

Mansfield fans had little more to cheer about in the preliminary game than they did in the main event. The host reserves took the measure of the junior Tygers, 35 to 25. They held a 22 to 13 lead at the half.

Joe Romano of Mansfield led the young Tygers with 16 points, and Shull was high for Ashland with 17.

SEABISCUIT, HEELFLY MEET ON 'COMEBACK' TRAIL

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—Track conditions permitting, a drama of the turf may be unfolded at Santa Anita today. Seabscuit and Heelfly are due to hook up for the first time since they ran a dead heat for victory in the Laurel mile in 1937.

Hard luck has fallen across their paths since that day. They meet now on the "comeback" trail.

Madison, Lexington Annex County Games

Rams Defeat Union, 30 to 24, and Minutemen Turn Back Lucas, 31 to 25.

COACH AL FENDRICK'S Madison Rams marked up their sixth Richland county league triumph last night and gained sole possession of second place in the title chase.

Madison turned back Union, 30 to 24, on the Madison court, but it took some help from the Lexington Minutemen to enable the Rams to take clear title to the runner-up spot.

While the Rams were handing Union its ninth circuit setback, Lucas, which had shared the berth, was losing a decision to Lexington.

Paced by Doug DeNero, who was the offensive star of the evening, the Rams, after battling to a tie in the opening frame, came charging back to topple Mentor Jim Hunter's hoopsters.

The Rams held an 11-point advantage as play opened in the final quarter, but had to throttle a desperate Union scoring spree to emerge with the verdict. Union outscored Madison, 10-5, in that last chapter.

* * *

The score was deadlocked at 4-all in the initial stanza, then Madison went ahead, 15 to 8, at the half and was leading 25 to 14 at the end of the third quarter.

DeNero collected 13 points for the winners, while Curry topped the invaders with eight markers.

The Union reserves defeated the Madison seconds, 25 to 19, in the preliminary contest.

Pete Grohol Leads Tire Loop With 654

PETE GROHOL walloped the uprights for a fancy 654 count to gain individual scoring honors in the Mansfield Tire league at the Meder alleys last night.

Bowling with the Mill Room team, Grohol collected scores of 223, 235 and 195. His team, however, dropped two tilts to Tire Room No. 1, which was high in the five-man figures with 2647.

The only other 600 was rolled by Bill Donnellan of the Maintenance club, who socked the uprights for a 610 count.

RESERVE CAGE CENTER TO CONTINUE PLAYING

CLEVELAND—(AP)—A nervous condition kept Joe Scott, Western Reserve University track star and basketball center, from taking semester examinations, but it won't keep him out of sports—for a while, at least. Physicians who advised him to forego examinations have urged him to continue with athletics, so he'll probably be in the lineup for the Reserve-Ohio University basketball game Saturday at Athens.

Here are the Carpenter grade school cagers who are involved in a nip-and-tuck fight for undisputed leadership in the city elementary league with the Bushnell courtiers. Both teams have won 12 out of 14 games and are only one game ahead of Bowman. Members of the Carpenter team are, left to right—Dave Richards, Carroll Mercer, Kenneth Schafer, Bill Morris, Tom Nixon, Al Gerich, Charles Sisco and John Walters. Hank Richards coaches the Carpenters.

No Pro Football for Hutchins

DALLAS, Tex. — (INS) — A slightly stronger indictment of college football than he made on his own campus was left here yesterday by President Robert Maynard Hutchins of the University of Chicago.

Explaining why football was dropped as a sport at Chicago, President Hutchins told members of the Woodrow Wilson high school faculty:

"Football players must be bought—subsidized. We decided not to go into the football player business at Chicago. Why, we might as well hire Joe Louis or Jack Dempsey . . . as a band of professional football players."

Hutchins emphasized, however, that he was not recommending what other schools should do. He said he liked football as a sport, but objected to its "confusion with education."

PATTY FOUR UNDER PAR AS SHE WINS OPENER

CORAL GABLES, Fla.—(AP)—Patty Berg of Minneapolis and other favorites faced a busy day today in the Miami Biltmore Women's golf tournament. Two 18-hole rounds were on the program.

The red-haired Miss Berg, returning to competition after a seven-month layoff due to an appendectomy, was matched with Louise Suggs of Lithia Springs, Ga., in the morning round. She fired a four under women's par to defeat Mrs. Richard E. Jarrett of Philadelphia, 9 and 8, in yesterday's opening round.

CLEVELAND SIGNS PAIR OF TIGER FREE AGENTS

CLEVELAND—(AP)—The Cleveland Indians' dip into the Detroit grab bag gives them two youthful hurlers—Calvin Dorsett, last with Fort Worth, and Bryan Stevens, rookie with Los Angeles in 1939. Both sent in signed contracts yesterday and the Indian office announced it would take Dorsett, 23-year-old righthander, to spring training camp, and send Stevens, 19, to Wilkes-Barre for seasoning.

FELLER'S INTERESTED IN WINS, NOT STRIKEOUTS

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — (AP)— It will be all right with Bob Feller if 1940 brings him the no-hit game he's narrowly missed three times, but the Cleveland fireballer is more interested in winning games.

"That's the easiest way to get 'em out, though, but not letting 'em hit the ball," said Feller, here on vacation. "But I don't start a game with any striking record in mind. All I want is to win."

REFUSES TO COMMENT ON LANDIS SUGGESTION

DURHAM, N. C.—(AP)—President W. G. Bramham, head of the minors, declined yesterday to comment on the plan suggested by Commissioner K. M. Landis as a substitute for baseball's so-called farm system.

"The plan," Bramham said, "is the result of 'long observation and study' on the part of the proposer. It would require similar consideration and study on my part before I would feel prepared to comment on it. It will be given the thorough study which it deserves but I do not feel justified in expressing an opinion at this time."

NEBRASKA NOT SEEKING BERTH IN BIG TEN

INDIANAPOLIS —(AP)— Major Lawrence (Biff) Jones, Nebraska university football coach, declared in an interview here yesterday that the Cornhuskers were not "actively seeking membership in the Big Ten and have not been invited."

Here attending the American Legion's Boys' State conference, Jones pointed out his team "can get every bit as good a schedule in surrounding states."

BOUDREAU STUDYING AT ILLINOIS SCHOOL

URBANA, Ill.—(AP)—Louis Boudreau, shortstop on the Cleveland Indians baseball team, will receive his degree from the University of Illinois next month.

Boudreau has finished his work in the college of education and hopes to become a basketball coach in baseball's offseason.

ed Lucas into a three-way tie with Butler and Lexington for third place in the circuit race.

Lucas grabbed the lead in the first period, but was unable to halt Shaffer and his teammates the rest of the way.

Shaffer, crack forward, dumped in 16 points, to cop individual honors and pace Lexington to its fifth league victory.

Behind, 8 to 5, at the end of the initial frame, the Minutemen spurted to take a 16 to 15 advantage at the rest period, and increased their lead to a 24-19 count as the clubs went into the final chapter.

Franks, Lucas center, led the invaders with 10 points.

In the preliminary contest, the Lexington seconds edged the Lucas reserves, 19 to 18.

350 TEAMS EXPECTED TO STATE TOURNAMENT

TOLEDO—The largest prize list in history has been guaranteed contestants in the 37th annual tournament of the Ohio State Bowling association. Entries for this year's event, which is expected to attract more than 350 five-man squads to Toledo, will close March 23.

The tourney opens April 12 at Hagerty's Interurban alleys and will continue for five consecutive week-ends.

CUBS, CARDINALS ONLY BIG TIME CLUBS ON SKED

ST. LOUIS—(AP)—The Chicago Cubs and the St. Louis Cardinals are the only major league teams on the St. Louis Browns' spring exhibition schedule, announced last night. The rather limited booking of 27 games also calls for meetings with Toledo of the American Association and Tulsa and San Antonio of the Texas league.

Opposes Shorter Skeds

Toledo Official Launches Attack Against Athletic Association's Plan.

By FRITZ HOWELL.

COLUMBUS—(AP)— Grant Murray, vice president of Toledo's board of education, launched an attack today on the Ohio high school athletic association's plan to curtail football and basketball schedules and to eliminate late-season gridiron "bowl" games.

* * *

Murray also advocated taking over of the parent body by the state department of education, or the formation of a new association by schools in the larger cities and those having well-rounded athletic programs.

"All large schools," Murray declared, "are constantly bothered by rules set up by small town principals who compose the Ohio state board."

"Many of the larger schools," he said, "have assumed obligations . . . the building of stadiums, baseball diamonds, running tracks, tennis courts, etc . . . in the expectation of paying off this indebtedness through their only available means, revenue from football.

"Should they now be forced to curtail their football schedules below the 10 games many of them play, the resulting decrease in income, in many cases, would make it impossible for them to meet payments on their bonded indebtedness and to support such non-paying sports as tennis, golf, swimming, basketball and track. The debt payments must be met, so the non-paying sports would suffer or be eliminated."

Why schold the board cut out post-season football games, and still allow the state basketball tournament at Columbus?" he asked.

* * *

Murray also objected to the fact that smaller football-playing schools, many of which he said had little chance to be invited to "bowl" games, would be permitted to vote on a referendum to ban the post-season events.

FLORIDA LEAGUE PILOT TO SCOUT FOR INDIANS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. —(AP)— Don Moshane, who never was quite handy enough with a bat to make the major leagues as a player, has crashed the big time as a scout.

Moshane, manager in the Florida State league from 1936 through last season, was appointed Pacific Coast scout for Cleveland yesterday after a telephone conference with C. C. Slapnicka, vice president and general manager of the Indians.

TEXAS LEAGUE MOGULS IN FAVOR OF AIR TRAVEL

DALLAS—(AP)—J. Alvin Gardner, oil man-baseball executive, expects the Texas league to become the first organization of its kind to adopt airplane transportation.

The league has $100,000 in idle money and five of the eight club owners are in favor of the plan, Gardner said yesterday it might require a couple of seasons to get his idea across but he felt certain all owners would fall in line. Under Gardner's plan the league would purchase a first-class plane that would transport 21 persons, operating it for the general interest of the circuit.

PRICES, SHARES MOVE SLOWLY IN DULL MART

Traders Await More Definite News Developments; Bonds Point Down.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Traders in stocks sat tight today—and prices and shares moved only slightly.

The ticker tape was halting momentarily after almost every transaction.

Bond prices paralleled stocks. Commodities were slightly higher. London and Amsterdam markets were steady, while Paris prices declined slightly.

Market commentators generally agreed that investors were holding to their stocks, awaiting some definite news development which would induce them to "go back into the market."

Boardrooms looked with interest at the $41,116,039 profit report for 1939 of U. S. Steel corporation, noting that about 60 per cent of the profit—$28,835,282—was made in the last three months of the year under war-stimulated draught.

The vast stimulation in United States' exports, which in December set a nine and one-half year record, was regarded on Wall street as a leading indicator of the position of firms engaged in trading abroad.

The department of commerce reported foreign trade for 1939 at about $5,500,000, an increase of $440,000,000 over 1938.

Also of wide interest was the Associated Press compilation of the earnings of the first 100 corporations reporting for 1939 an increase of 67 per cent in profits over 1938.

THEATERS

HOLLYWOOD is giggling over Mickey Rooney's courtships which are as numerous and short-lived off the screen as on. Now when he calls one of his girls and she isn't home he leaves this message: "Just say Rhett Butler called." Mickey thought Clark Gable's Rhett Butler in G. W. T. W. was the greatest lady-killing hero in history. . . . The Gables are on vacation in Mexico in their station wagon and are going place, where no one will recognize them. . . . Martha Scott, the Kansas City girl who made a hit in the New York stage show "Our Town," has gone to Hollywood to make the screen version. She has just finished paying the last $100 installment on $1,500 which Ida B. Lilly, her former school teacher loaned her to start her career. . . .

Mexican Singer Returns.

Tito Guizar, young Mexican singer, returns to the screen to star in "The Llano Kid," which the Madison offers on its double feature bill current at that theater. Tito plays a romantic Mexican who is one half bandit and one half love-struck swain. The story is based on O. Henry's short story "The Double-Dyed Deceiver." "Our Neighbors—the Carters" is another family picture with a cast which includes Fay Bainter, Frank Craven, Edmund Lowe and Genevieve Tobin.

Mansfielders Knew Hero.

The six-day engagement of "The Fighting 69th" closes Thursday night at the Ohio. At least a half dozen Mansfield men personally knew Father Duffy, the fighting Cathodic chaplain of the Irish regiment and one of the leading characters in the historical drama. The picture opens and closes with a view of the marble memorial which has been erected to Father Duffy in New York City. James Cagney and George Brent play major roles, while Pat O'Brien is seen as Father Duffy.

Rathbone as Detective.

Basil Rathbone continues his role of Sherlock Holmes, the super-detective in "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes." The mystery centers around an arch criminal who is acquitted of a murder in a London court room when Holmes knows he is guilty. The criminal tells the detective that he will commit the super crime of the century and no one will solve it. The picture is being shown at the Ritz, where the second feature is "This Man Is News."

Oomph Girl Starred.

First National Pictures borrowed on the title of "Angels With Dirty Faces" when they made "The Angels Wash Their Faces," but the two pictures are entirely different. In the latter Ann Sheridan and The Dead End Kids are starred. Sharing honors with this film on the Majestic bill is "Wuthering Heights," chosen one of the "ten best" films of the year. Lawrence Olivier and Merle Oberon are starred in this tragic love story of the English moors.

Love and War.

"Lost On the Western Front" moves from the World war to 20 years later when a deception perpetrated on a young girl by the man who wants to marry her but knows she is in love with another man, brings its own retribution. Paul Cavanaugh, Garry Marsh and Marcelle Chantal have the leading roles. The Park theater is also showing "King of the Turf" with Adolphe Menjou, Dolores Costello, Walter Abel and Alan Dinehart.

Aid to Finland, Jap Embargo Facing Further Delays

DEMS, G. O. P. WANT TO QUIZ HULL, JONES

Committee Members Seeking Full Picture of Proposals Made on Both Questions.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON— Ranking Republican and Democratic members of the senate foreign relations committee threatened today to delay early congressional action on proposed Finnish-aid and Japanese embargo legislation by demanding that high administration officials be called to testify on both questions.

The committee holds its regular weekly meeting today—the first since the expiration of the Japanese-American trade treaty last Friday. Committee Chairman Key Pittman, D., Nev., will lay before the members various proposals to embargo shipments to Japan and a plan approved by the senate banking and currency committee that would make possible a non-military loan to Finland, by the export-import bank.

Want Hull Heard.

Amid increasing sentiment in the senate to go slowly in considering an embargo against Japan, Sens. Pat Harrison, D., Miss., ranking Democratic member of the foreign relations committee, Hiram W. Johnson, R., Calif., ranking Republican member, and Walter F. George, D., Ga., demanded that Secretary of State Cordell Hull be heard on both the embargo and Finnish aid bills, and that Federal Loan Administrator Jesse H. Jones be asked to explain the plan to lend Finland money.

Pittman had hoped for quick action on the Finnish-aid bill, but conceded that the Japanese embargo legislation might lead to extensive debate.

Johnson, who succeeded to the top minority committee post held by the late Sen. William E. Borah, R., Ida., said he believed careful study should be given the Finnish-aid program, which involves a $100,000,000 increase in the export-import bank's revolving fund.

"I'd like to hear the secretary of state, and I'd like to hear Jesse Jones," he said, "not only to inform myself but to inform the people of the United States. There's a grave question involved, and we ought to move cautiously. That also applies to the Japanese embargo proposals."

Neither Hull nor Jones was scheduled to attend today's meeting, but both have conferred informally with senators interested in the two problems.

Harrison announced his opposition to a Finnish loan and as an alternative proposed that Finland be permitted to sell bonds to American sympathizers, the proceeds of which could be used by Finland to buy muintions or what ever supplies it needs.

MAYOR SPEAKS

Galion Executive Urges Club to Boost Local Projects.

GALION — One of the speakers, when committee chairmen were in charge of the program Tuesday noon at the Kiwanis luncheon meeting, was Mayor W. M. King.

He urged that local citizens get behind local projects for the good of the city, and asked that a group of Kiwanis members, together with other interested citizens, attend a meeting of the county commissioners next Monday for a hearing on the preposed annexation of land to the city of Galion. This annexation which extends the city limits in various directions, is important, King said.

Other speakers were William Gledhill, Rev. Philip E. Auer, C. L. Morkel, E. R. Pickering.

On Feb. 13, the club will attend the Scout-Parent banquet at the Junior high school.

PERKINS GIVES LEWIS ANSWER

"Woozy In Head' Charge Blamed On 'Political Times,' She Says.

BAYONNE, N. J.—(U.P.)—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins returned a soft answer last night to John L. Lewis' remark that she was "woozy in the head."

"These are political times," Miss Perkins said, "and people are apt to say anything."

Here to address a meeting at Bayonne high school, Miss Perkins at first refused to comment on the remark made by the congress of industrial organizations president at the United Mine Workers' convention in Columbus, O.

TEACHERS MEET

GALION — On Tuesday afternoon in the library of Senior high school, the Galion Classroom Teachers association held its regular meeting, and members listened to a report given by Chester Stover, principal of the East school, who was a delegate to the meeting of the Ohio Educational association at Columbus, Jan. 4 and 5.

Richard Patterson presided for the meeting when routine business was transacted. Walter Smdlinger, high school teacher and director of dramatics and speech, presented Junior Kruger, a member of the Senior Speech class, who gave a talk on the "Value of a Hobby."

TALKS GIVEN

Travel talks featured the meeting of the Girl Reserves at Senior high school, Tuesday evening.

The program was in charge of the program committee of which Carol Gardner is chairman. She presented Dorothy Ricker who told of Cuba, and Donna Verniece Garverick whose talk was about Florida. A general discussion following the program, was led by Carol Gardner, and group singing was led by Eleanor Cronenwett.

SHELVES THIRD TERM PROPOSAL

Mine Union Committee Would Postpone Endorsement of Presidential Favorite.

and representation and with the determination of the party to honestly, airly and in the ways of true Americanism, apply itself to the solution of the grave problems that confront us all in America; end unemployment, provide jobs, improve wage and condition standards, adequate security in old age and unemployment, a more equitable and just distribution of our national income, adequate purchasing power — in a word, real economic justice and social security which constitute the best protection for our institutions and for the perpetuity of our democratic form of government to which we pledge our lives and our resources," the resolution stated.

The committee said that it was impossible "due to the uncertainty and chaos that exist," to outline at this time any concrete policy or program that would be certain to protect and advance the best interests of labor, and said that leaving political action to the board's discretion was "the only sensible, sane and proper course."

The resolution did not oppose Mr. Roosevelt's re-election for a third term but UMW President John L. Lewis already has said he does not believe Mr. Roosevelt will be a candidate. If he is, Lewis has predicted his "ignominious defeat."

Forty-seven local unions had submitted resolutions to the UMW convention asking that President Roosevelt be drafted for a third term.

Adam Savich, Grant Town, W. Va., said that he supported the resolution to refer to the executive board and that he hoped the board's choice of a candidate should be made after President Roosevelt discloses whether he will run for a third term, and that if the president does decide to run, that the miners should endorse him.

Savich said the respect and admiration for Mr. Roosevelt was equal to that felt for President Lewis of the UMW and declared that the Roosevelt administration had proved itself favorable to labor.

C. O. Williams, Denbo, Pa., said he wanted "the inference as left by the newspapers that we have broken personally with President Roosevelt removed."

"I do not believe the resolution is aimed at Roosevelt," he said, "but at people in legislative office who have gone in on his coattails and then gave him the double-cross and gave labor the double-cross."

He said "the impression was left" by Lewis that he was "fighting Roosevelt." Williams said he did not believe that to be the case but that "our people back home are confused."

Criticizes WPA In Building Trades.

MIAMI, Fla. —(INS)— Employment of WPA workers at relief wages in competition with skilled union men in the nation's building industry was sharply criticized today as "unfair and unjust" by John P. Coyne, president of the Building and Construction Trades of the American Federation of Labor.

This policy is helping break down the foremost industry in the country," declared Coyne, whose organization has a membership of 1,100,000 and is one of the most powerful unions in the A. F. of L.

Coyne supported the position of William Green, president of the A. F. of L., who at a meeting here of the executive council, said his organization favors the return of the building construction in the United States to private industry as rapidly as possible.

Both Coyne and Green admit that WPA has a place in the economic picture at the present time but they and other labor leaders assembled in Miami bitterly resent the employment of WPA labor by the government in a way that they claim has the effect of beating down the wage standard."

Roger A. Black, manager of the foreign trade department of the Ohio Brass company, said his company supported the program in the belief that it makes for better relations between the United States and South American countries, and is beneficial to both continents. He said that through the present program of reciprocity, American-made goods was sold in foreign countries under much lower tariffs.

COMPLAINTS ON COUGHLIN PILE UP, U.S. REPORTS

Department of Justice Tells of New Criticism; Check on Christian Front Again.

WASHINGTON — A flood of complaints concerning the activities of Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, the Detroit "radio priest," has been received by the department of justice over a period of months, department officials announced today.

Attorney General Robert H. Jackson criticised a Jewish organization today for publishing a "form" letter sent it in reply to a request for a justice department investigation of Coughlin in connection with the Christian Front.

The form reply included this paragraph:

"Kindly be advised that the matters mentioned in your communication are receiving the attention of the department."

"This is a form reply customarily made to complainants bringing to the attention of the department alleged violations of federal law," Jackson said.

He explained that Assistant General O. John Rogge is now seeking to learn who financed the activities of the 17 New York men, members of the Sports club and the Christian Front charged with seditious conspiracy.

Rogge said a special grand jury would be convened in Chicago in an attempt to determine who is financing Christian Front activities in that area.

Coughlin has disavowed membership in the Christian Front but has been quoted as saying "nevertheless I do not dissociate myself from that movement."

The priest also has assailed former Attorney General Murphy and J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, for not "apprehending the 2,000 or more Communists working . . . almost under their eyes."

ALLIES, NAZIS PREPARING FOR GREATER ACTION

Expect Major Warfare to Start Soon; London Derides Speech by German Chancellor.

niversary speech last night his declaration that Germany would "live" and would fight until its "rights" were won.

"Answer to Chamberlain and Daladier" and "Settling of accounts with the plutocracies" were two headlines. Voelkischer Beobachter, official newspaper organ of the Nazi party, headlined in red ink across it first page "They will get their fight!" and said in subsidiary headlines: "Adolf Hitler's reply to Chamberlain and Daladier: there can be no agreement without achievement of our rights."

The little nations studied the speeches closely for new threats to their neutrality and further inspected their preparations for defense.

At Copenhagen, a German plane flew through clear skies to within three miles of the capital, was fired on by Danish anti-aircraft guns and drew representations from the Danish government to Berlin. Appearance of the plane increased the nervousness of the smaller capitals.

At Bucharest, it was understood that more men were being called up for training than at any time since the Rumanian capital expressed fears of difficulties on the Hungarian frontier last spring. Possibly 2,000,000 men will be under arms in Rumania this spring and it was said that they might be kept on duty until the end of the war. Rumania recently has built extensive new frontier defenses from Hungary to the Soviet frontier.

Discuss Troop Landings.

At Brussels, the newspaper Libre Belgique published a dispatch from Berlin telling of the discussion by German officers of a plan for landing Nazi troops from "dreadnaught airplanes" in Great Britain and behind the French Maginot line. This method of warfare—hinted vaguely in some pre-war remarks attributed to Hitler—may be the widely-discussed "secret weapon" which the Germans are supposed to have developed, the correspondent suggested in line with Hitler's speech last night promising that the war would be carried to Britain and France.

The Finnish fighting continued to produce reports of the failure of the Russian offensive northeast of Lake Ladoga, where the Red army has spent many lives and 11 days vainly attempting to turn the flank of the Mannerheim line. Dispatches from Helsinki said that the Finnish fort at Mantsi island, on the northesat side of the lake, still was holding out against repeated Russian attempts to attack it across the ice.

The Mantsi fort has become almost the key to the operations northeast of the lake, where the Finns as well as the Russians have suffered big losses. Guns of the fort can direct a punishing fire into the Russian rear lines and have been largely responsible for breaking up the Red army attacks.

Farther north, according to dispatches to Scandinavian newspapers, Finnish troops—supported by Swedish volunteers have smashed the operations of the Russian 54th infantry division in fighting opposite Raesti, which lies north of Kuhmo and south of Suomussalmi on the north central front.

Messages to Copenhagen reported that the Russian forces had sought to entrench themselves strongly in the Raesti sector, but that the Finns and Swedes had launched a sudden attack that broke up the Red army positions and inflicted considerable casualties. The Moscow communique said that Red airplanes had made a number of successful raids against Finnish bases but that there were no important ground operations.

Losses at Sea.

Two days of German raids on British shipping had taken more lives today, and ships bombed and machine-gunned were still limping into port.

The 2,718-ton Freighter Giralda, one of the latest casualties reported, was sunk by bombs a half mile from the Orkney islands with a loss of 16 of the crew.

The Freighter Bancrest, 4,450 tons, sent out a distress call late last night and an unidentified steamer went to the rescue and reported all but one of the crew saved. The Bancrest met disaster off the north Scottish coast, of a nature not yet learned.

In addition to the ships sunk and attacked by planes, two Danish steamers went down after explosions off the Scottish coast with the loss of all hands on both ships except one second officer. They were the 2,094-ton Fredenborg, which sank after two explosions, either mines or torpedoes, and the 2,767-ton steamer England, which suffered the same fate.

FOG AND SMOKE DO A BLACKOUT

City Gropes in Early Morning Hours; Warmer Weather Due Tonight, Thursday.

zero at 7:30 this morning, other thermonmeters gave readings considerably higher, going no lower than six degrees.

Cloudy and warmer weather is predicted for tonight, with lower temperatures Thursday night and Friday. The mercury stood at 22 at noon today.

Along the ice-blocked Ohio river the warmer weather gave rivermen renewed hope of early resumption of navigation. Yesterday's sun softened the ice considerably and reduced the danger of flood from the gorges which piled up last week. Engineers predicted the gorges would start breaking up the latter part of the week if the temperature continues in the 30's.

Edward Welch, 18 Bell street, who was fined $20 and costs in municipal court this morning on a charge of careless and reckless driving, blamed the fog for his accident. On Route 13, near Possum Run golf course, he sideswiped a truck and ran into the rear of a school bus, damaging the latter. He claimed he was unable to see the bus because of the fog.

CAST OF FOUR SCORES IN PLAY

Succeeds in Keeping Interest High in Vehicle Devoted Chiefly to Conversation.

in an excellent portrayal. Apparently without effort she made her auditors dislike the character and like the actress.

New to the players, John Catlett as the selfish young Duke of Bristol accentuated his role slowly at first but built it into one of the most amusing in the play.

His scene with Mrs. Schettler in the third act, in which he produced a slightly rumpled handkerchief as the symbol of truce between them, was a high spot of the performance.

Herbert Schettler, as the mildly intelligent Richard, was good. He seems to have that faculty of having his audience "with" him from his entrance cue. And he never loses them. As in his role of the supreme court justice in "First Lady" two years ago, he demonstrated his mastery of the trick, dear to home town spectators, of doing his characterization ably without ever quite completely losing himself in it.

His scenes with Mrs. Schettler were played with a convincing drollery that merited the applause which climaxed them.

In settings of unusual expertness and attractiveness, designed by Harold McCuen, the play received an extra edge of nicety from its pleasant costuming. Costumes were in charge of Barbara Meisse.

In every crossing and gesture of the play appeared the adroitness with which Director Ben Goodenough had skilled his cast. This was Goodenough's first job of direction single-handed for the Players and it showed a highly creditable knowledge of stage technique and timing.

John McCann was business manager for the show. Properties were in charge of Kathleen Sturges, Daniel Reese, Pearl Rube, and Jane Bacon.

Charles Callahan, Ralph Shiveley, Rex Collins, Richard Collins, and John White comprised the stage crew.

The Player's next production, Robert Sherwood's "The Petrified Forest," will be under the direction of Helen Bacon who heads the Player's staff. It will be presented in March.

Music before the play and for the entr'actes was played by an orchestra under the direction of Lawrence Todd.

MAN RECOVERS

Paul Raptiski Treated After Vein Is Cut in Fight.

Paul Raptiski, 20 Lewis avenue, the "innocent bystander" who was wounded when two men got into a fight at a restaurant at the corner of Sixth and Main streets Monday, was recovering at his home today.

George Williams and George Kelly, both of 21½ East Third street, got into a fight in the restaurant, according to police, and when the proprietor asked them to leave, they broke the glass in the front door. Splinters from the flying glass hit Raptiski, who was standing near the entrance, and cut into a vein in the temple. He was rushed to General hospital for treatment and later was taken to his home.

The two men were arrested for intoxication and were fined $5 and costs in municipal court today. Williams was committed to city jail to serve out this fine as well as a previous one that had not been paid.

JAPAN FAILS

Admits Negotiations Collapse to Delmit Mongolia Frontier.

TOKYO —(U.P.)— Failure after nine weeks of negotiations to delimit the Manchukuo-Outer Mongolia frontier was announced today by Yakichiro Suma, spokesman for the foreign office.

Suma said Japanese, Monchukuan, outer Mongolian and Russian delegates, meeting at Harbin, Manchukuo, had signed a statement yesterday admitting their inability to agree and announcing the cessation of their negotiations.

In confessing this failure, Sima said progress was being made in commercial negotiations now proceeding with Russia at Moscow.

The negotiations were started at Chita, Siberia, Dec. 7, and transferred on Christmas day to Harbin.

Gen. U. S. Grant's tomb in New York was built by popular subscription at a cost of $600,000.

RULE BEN WEST OUT OF PRIMARY

affidavits as a representative of Charles West.

Ehrich's affidavit said that he had attempted to fill in the name of Charles West when the petition was presented to him by McConnell, but was told that it was not required.

He said he had not circulated the petition to obtain signatures for Ben West.

The board this morning accepted and certified the other nine candidates.

They include on the Republican side J. Harry McGregor, West Lafayette, majority leader of the house; Walter B. Woodward, Beelville Townsendite, the Republican nominee two years ago, and Col. Oliver H. Dockery, Newark, retired army officer.

The Democratic lineup now includes Frank Cave, Mansfield realtor, former speaker of the house; Byron B. Ashbrook, Johnstown banker; Ben A. Arneson, Ohio Wesleyan university professor; George J. McDonald, assistant Licking county prosecutor; William Haas, Delaware, former assistant attorney general, and B. B. Ferenbaugh, Danville atorney.

The elimination of West by the board today marked the second time he has been ruled out of the primary due to a lack of signatures on his petitions. He failed to qualify in 1938 when he lacked the necessary 100 qualified signatures.

The deadline for registrations and transfers for the special primary is 6:30 p. m. today.

Meanwhile the board this afternoon awarded to the Lindeman and Almy printery, Mansfield, the contract for printing 25,000 ballots on the firm's low bid of $245.50.

The successful bidder was $10 lower than its closest competitor, the Richland Printing company, which submitted a price of $255. The Bellville Star submitted a bid of $260.

Absent voters will have until Saturday noon to obtain ballots. A. F. Porter, clerk, said the ballots must be in the hands of the board by Monday noon.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 31, 1940.

Those who went south for the winter seem to have found it.

According to a sociologist, "Millions are growing up with a distaste for toil"—but just when was toil a popular pastime?

Now that a gasoline shortage is reported from Europe, some folks in this country are getting a better idea of the hardships of war.

The Village Movement

BACK in the little town of Scarsdale, New York, a movement was recently started which is typically in the American tradition.

It is known as "The Village Movement," and is sponsored by a group of representative citizens. Its purpose is to restore representative government and to let business expand and make more jobs. Its ten objectives include: To uphold the Constitutional division of power of the Federal government; to restore to the Federal government simplicity of form and economy of operation; to resist government encroachment upon legitimate business; to encourage agriculture and industry, and aid those in need through local machinery; to support labor in its right to work and bargain collectively; to foster all social improvements of reasonable character which the country can pay for, and to resist the coercive tactics of all pressure groups.

The underlying purpose of this movement is obvious—to impress the people and the local community with the traditions of the nation's founders. Few realize how far we have strayed from the principle of local self-rule. The independence and rights of local government have been lost little by little, almost without notice. And the result has been to create a gigantic and incredibly costly federal bureaucracy which is inevitably opposed to the perpetuation of true democracy.

What these Scarsdale people have done, might well be emulated on the widest possible scale by thousands of other communities of America.

Hurried Choice of Congressman

THE hurried choice of a congressman to fill the short unexpired term of the late William A. Ashbrook is to be regretted, as is also the politically inspired decision of Governor Bricker to call special primaries and election, at high cost to each of the counties in the Seventeenth district.

Under ordinary conditions voters in a congressional district have ample time to become acquainted with candidates, and to consider the qualifications of each, before nominating at the primaries or making final choice at the election.

With ten aspirants in the field, however—seven Democrats and three Republicans—and with six counties in the district, it is quite unlikely that any considerable number of voters will become familiar with the names of all the candidates, to say nothing of being able to learn enough about them to choose intelligently from among them.

Except for Republican organization pressure put on him, it would be difficult to explain Governor Bricker's action in forcing this needless expense on counties of this district—a cost entirely out of proportion to any possible service a congressman could be to this district in the few weeks between the time he can qualify and adjournment of congress.

Scouts to Serve as Officials

THE annual Boy Scout election, just held in Mansfield, to select scouts to serve in city offices one day early in February, is a part of practical education that can be made of lasting benefit to all of the boys who participated.

Procedure was, as nearly as practicable, along lines followed in regular elections, with two major parties represented and votes cast for competing candidates. Through such practices, coupled with the experience of observing the methods of operation of various city offices, these young people will be better equipped for the duties and responsibilities of citizenship, which they will soon be called upon to assume.

There would be an advantage in the greatest possible extension of similar practical instruction among Mansfield boys and girls.

Russia's Unready Army

CAPTURED Red prisoners in Finland, talking to American correspondents, throw some light on the army that marched casually in to conquer Finland and made such a tragic botch of it. The "army of occupation" seems to have consisted largely of men 30 to 40 years old, with little training and poor equipment. The soldiers had been told, too, that the Finns were friendly and ready for Russian annexation and there would be little or no trouble. Naturally they were amazed at the fight they got into, and helpless against an army as fine as any in Europe.

This is all the more remarkable because Russia is known to have had a large army, supposedly well trained and equipped, and foreign visitors had been much impressed with Red troops they saw parading in Moscow.

Considerable units of that vaunted Red army seem to be fighting now on the Finnish front, and are doing better, although they are not yet breaking the stout Finnish resistance.

Kindly Words for Jazz

JOSEPH SZIGETI, concert violinist, speaks kindly of jazz. He thinks it has had a good influence on the performance and appreciation of music generally.

"Not jazz," says Mr. Szigeti, "but the Victorian ballads—those laboriously sentimental tunes that oozed over the mind like heavy, sweet syrup—have done more harm to music than anything else. They slowed its progress. Jazz, on the other hand, has raised the standard of efficiency in playing music. It also has sharpened the receptivity of the listener. Great music will benefit from that."

Doubtless there are jazz-despisers who will say that this theory is a little like the one that holds it's a pleasure to hit yourself on the head with a hammer because you feel so good when you stop. Other listeners will say that, anyhow, jazz isn't so bad as swing.

Jazz enthusiasts agree with Mr. Szigeti and add that jazz has value in itself. The final word on jazz and its place in music probably remains to be spoken a generation or two hence.

With all the talk about "planned families," the Papa Dionne incident gives an idea that allowance must be made for exceptions.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Secrets on Broadway travel faster than favorites at Hialeah. I was sitting in the Beachcomber's bar having a bowl of Egg Flower soup when a man known to all Broadway as Dave came by. Dave is the proprietor of Dave's Blue Room, a famous Broadway eating place that failed several months ago.

Outside of Lindy's and perhaps one or two others, none of the late hour restaurants was as famous or enjoyed the patronage that was Dave's. I never cared much for the place, personally, because it was always filled with loud-talking actors. But if you wanted to see famous people, Dave's was the place.

They say Dave never refused a meal to anyone. They say actors have dined "on the cuff" for months on end against the day when their ship or a new job would come in.

BUT Dave ran into reverses and the Blue Room folded. To many of Broadway's best-known this was a minor tragedy in their lives. Famous song hits had been written on the table covers by Tin Pan alley chiefs between cups of black coffee. At least one famous star became engaged over a plate of Canadian bacon and eggs at Dave's. Gangsters went there, too. . . . Dave's was Broadway.

Now let's get back to the Beachcomber's. Dave and another man came in. As he passed I just happened to hear him say, "Don't say anything about it—not a word; don't mention it to anybody." I presume his companion solemnly promised to carry that secret to the grave; that is the usual way of things. But in any case, Dave came back a few minutes later and sat down. He seemed a little excited. . . . After a while I said, "What's worrying you, Dave?"

Dave flung around and leaned over the table. "I'm going to open a new restaurant—a swell place on 52nd street—a new Blue Room. But don't say anything about it. Deal's all set. I'll announce it in a couple of weeks. Swell place. Just right. Deal's almost set."

"Swell, Dave," I said, "swell."

"Naw, I won't say anything."

IT MUST have been an hour later that I got up and got into a cab and went back to my office. On the drive across 50th street the cabby told me all about Dave's new place. "Gonna open sure in a couple of weeks," he said. "I got it from my brother whose wife's brother is one of the waiters. I don't think he wants it mentioned, though.

That was about 11 o'clock at night. I was supposed to do some work that night, but it was a bad night for work and I walked over to a radio and turned it on; a commentator who talks about Broadway and horses and such things came on the air. The first thing he announced was Dave's new Blue Room. He gave a glowing account of Dave's career. He told of all the long midnight history of the old Blue Room. Then he announced the new one, its exact location, and when it would open. He even explained that Tommy Manville (often a bridegroom but never for long) was Dave's secret angel—that Manville was putting up the money.

So, Dave's going to have a new restaurant. But don't say anything about it. It's strictly off the record.

Listen, World!

Be Humble—Be Proud.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

GET a swelled head sometimes, don't you? And then at other times, you're so discouraged you haven't the spunk of a fishworm, yes?

There's a cure for both conditions in the Natural History Museum in New York. They call him Dinosaur Tyrannosaurus, and he was even worse than he sounds.

Up and up and up through the gray dusty light of the vast hall, towers a mountain of bone—a mountain that was once an animal, the most frightful animal the world has ever seen.

Eighteen feet above the ground that hideous head was reared and its small, fierce eyes beheld a strange world — very different from our world of today. A quaking new world inhabited by giant reptiles that wallowed and clawed and flew through the steamy darkness.

The skeletons of those other reptiles stand around old tyrannosaurus. Even with that evidence we cannot realize that distant world, for it happened 30,000,000 years ago.

Try to think what it means. There before you are the leg bones that thrashed their way through primeval swamps—there are the very teeth that crunched and tore the monsters of his day—there is that forty-seven foot spinal column, with the bones almost as fresh as those you threw away from Sunday's roast.

Yet that beast lived 30,000,000 years ago . . . millions and millions of years before man was even thought of!

Bit by bit we've dug up that old world from its burial place under the rock and silt of centuries. One by one the skeletons have come to light—the mark of the footprints—the record of the trees and plants—the record even of the climate. Even the child can now read the story of the world which the dinosaurs inhabited and see that it wasn't a man's world.

Men couldn't have lived with beasts like that, nor found food or breath in climate like that. The earth had to come a long way before it was ready for man's frail body.

How does that make you feel? Mighty small? Mighty new? It should. It's the greatest cure on earth for a swelled head, partner. But it's also a grand boost for an inferiority complex.

For that mighty beast and his terrible world have passed and you are here. You are here, Bill Jones, little and soft and stupid and new—yet heir to all that world which the dinosaur tyrannosarus once commanded and smarter than all those huge, thirty-ton brutes put together.

His head would hold a young house and yours will hardly hold a baseball, and yet something burns in you that he never felt in all his titanic carcass.

Mind burns in you. Not very brightly — yet. But brightly enough to have made you king of the sea and earth and air. When it burns brightly enough to make you king of your own self then even heaven can't stop you.

Be humble, Bill Jones, when you look at the Big Boy and think how long the show went on before you were even considered.

But be proud when you think of what you've done in the short time since you arrived!

The Old Wood Stove

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

THE atmosphere is filled with snow. A gale rattles the windows and the metal roof sounds like thunder rolling. The windowpanes are beautifully printed with heads of ancient cereal grasses and fronds of trees that lived long ago in the glacial age. No matter how heavily I fire the old wood stove its heat will not melt down the frosted etchings.

The open hearth sends forth a glow so bright that it dims the oil lamp upon the kitchen table. Far out against the wall fitful shadows play. The merry flames within the stove roar through the short length of pipe and bring sparks fly up the chimney like chains of fire. A deep cherry glow forms along each side and grows redder on the top. The old copper teakettle sings a homey tune and then sends from its spout a curving white ribbon of steam.

I sit beside the old wood stove which is in its happiest mood tonight, and dream and remember. This temperamental stove is a vague relative of those of the Franklin type, or the template vintage. We had one when I was a little boy and I cringed in fear of the shadows on the wall when my mother went to milk and left us children there alone with the lamp unlit. Far off we heard the barking of a fox and the scream of wildcats up along the ridge. Those memories now bring an echo of pleasing fear.

I trek outside to fetch an armful of wood. A steady bluish smoke is rising from the chimney in the center of the roof and its fragrance comes to my nostrils mingled with the tang of keen frosty air.

Back inside, I brush the glowing coals forward toward the hearth and pile on the green sugar wood which I have brought. The pleasant odor of the summer maple grove clings to my hands for a long time afterward. Beech and white oak have pleasing odors too, and apple wood has a delightful fragrance. How comfortable to sit and warm oneself and one's household with the stored up sunshine of perhaps a hundred summers past, fanned jubilantly by the tempest of a wintry night!

Health And Diet

Respiratory Infections In Winter Diseases

—By DR. CLENDENING

THE four great winter diseases are respiratory infections (1) the common cold, (2) influenza, (3) chronic sinus and ear infection and (4) pneumonia.

The peak incidence of the common cold during the year is Feb. 1. So about this time of year the departments of public health and pharmaceutical houses publish announcements, the burden of which is "Avoid the common cold."

As a corollary to this they usually deplore the vast economic waste entailed by the common cold, the number of working days lost.

Wishful Thinking.

This column has always felt that a great deal of what is said on the subject is wishful thinking, and while it very properly tries to give aid and comfort to the defending armies, there is very little advice that is practical because very little of it, if followed out, results in any positive benefit.

It is very much like deploring the necessity of having the hair cut. That also involves a great deal of economic waste. I suppose this very day there are at least five million hours of working life being lost by the male population of this country because they are having their hair cut. Conservatively, in one year, time is consumed which would represent ten million entire life times, simply by having our hair cut. As for the dollars and cents involved, I saw a statement recently that the value of all the United States interests in China is only two-thirds of the value of the United States domestic barber business.

But nobody wails about the economic waste of hair cuts for the very good and sufficient reason that there is nothing to be done about it.

Same Way About Cold.

I feel exactly the same way about the common cold. To some of my nose and throat colleagues, who object to my iconoclastic views about cold vaccines, I have said that I could put everything that is positively known about the common cold in a short paragraph. They have challenged me to do so, and here it is.

The common cold is an infection of the mucous membrane of the nose, throat and bronchial tubes. It is, to a certain extent, contagious. It is caused not by a germ but by a virus. Secondary infection with germs is planted on top of the virus inflammation and prolongs the period of convalescence. It is accompanied by a slight fever, slight prostration, headache and muscle aches. It has no serious complications or sequelae. It is definitely associated with cold weather. The incidence is highest in those under four years old and drops to almost nothing after the age of 45, which indicates that in the course of time immunity is established. Cures are invented and believed in largely by people over 45 who do not realize that their immunity is not due to the treatment but to their age. Colds cannot be prevented by any vaccine, dietary measure of exercise. Avoidance of exposure helps to prevent. There is no method of treatment known that gives rapid relief. Bed rest is the best treatment. The only medicine known which gives relief is codeine. Codeine can be prescribed only by a physician.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—It's supposed to be a closely guarded secret, but the long awaited report of the Republican platform committee, headed by Dr. Glenn Frank, has been completed. It is now being circulated privately among party leaders, and will be submitted to the GOP national committee when it meets in Washington in mid-February.

Entitled "A Program for a Dynamic America" the document is 30,000 words long, and falls into two general parts. First, there is a scorching dissertation on the administration under three chapter headings: "European War and American Policy," "After Seven Years of New Deal Control," and "The New Deal Misunderstands America."

Second, there is a long outline of the "Republican position" in six chapters: "Towards a Foreign Relations Program," "Towards a Labor Program," "Towards a Farm Program," "Toward a Business Program," "Towards a Fiscal Program," and "Towards a Social Program."

Five Points.

ASIDE from the views expressed on the major political issues, five points stand out in the report:

1. Dr. Frank's committee claims that the Hoover administration had the country definitely on the road to recovery when the New Deal took office and disrupted this progress through unworkable policies.

2. It is claimed that the Hoover administration was the first in the history of the country to introduce direct federal relief for the unemployed.

3. The term "New Deal" is used throughout instead of "Democratic Party."

4. There is an unspoken but definitely implied approval of Roosevelt's fundamental farm program.

5. The program makes a sketchy straddle on the hot issue of reciprocal trade treaties.

The first two contentions, that Hoover had the U. S. A. on the road to recovery, and that he was the first to start "relief," are highly significant. They constitute a signal victory for the Hoover forces over forces within the committee which wanted to keep all reference to the ex-president out of the report. The third point also is a triumph for Hoover, who insists upon differentiating between the New Deal and the Democratic Party.

The tacit AAA endorsement, however, is a victory for the farm belt leaders, who consider it dangerous to arouse farmer fears that there will be any Republican tampering with New Deal benefit payments. On the other hand, the trade treaty straddle—which states "the tariff problem should be handled in such a manner as to best protect the living standards of the country"—is a score for the industrial forces which strongly favor the administration's reciprocal trade policies.

"Republican Position."

THE Hoover claim that the depression had been licked until the New Deal kicked over the applecart reads as follows:

"The American depression struck bottom in 1932. The United States could reasonably have been expected to follow the other major nations of the world into recovery if a drastic political overturn had not then subjected American enterprise to unpredictable politics and unworkable economics."

The report also states that New Deal economics actually are not new, but are based on obsolete theories held by the "least enlightened leadership of Big Business" around 1900, who advocated drastic controls over production in order to create artificial scarcity and thereby force up prices.

Relief.

HOOVER'S other sacred cow, relief, is handled by Dr. Frank in this manner: First, a statement that there is no question or argument over the government's obligation to aid those in need. Then follows this assertion, "Prior to the Hoover administration the federal government had not accepted this responsibility"—which is certain to bring on a torrent of Democratic denial of credit to Hoover.

Then the Frank committee proceeds to blast New Deal relief operations as extravagant, politics-ridden, unsound, and discriminatory "between racial groups." The report alleges that while the New Deal claims to have helped the Negro, actually the Negro has been the object of widespread discrimination.

The committee also recommends that relief be turned over to the states and localities—another pet Hoover theory—letting the federal government contribute with grants on a formula to be worked out by a national bi-partisan commission and submitted to congress for final approval.

Labor.

THE report hotly assails the National Labor Board, for alleged bias in administrative personnel, which is the basis of the attacks in congress and among labor, but because it acts as administrator, judge, jury and prosecutor.

Regarding the basic AFL-CIO dispute as to whether labor shall be organized along industrial or craft lines, the report says: "The form (of organization) should take its cue from the function."

Farm Aid.

THE report vigorously raps AAA bureaucracy but asserts that "the case for an extensive federal program for soil conservation is outside the area of partisan debate." Also, the committee holds that acreage control as a means of combating surpluses is not dependable because of unpredictable weather conditions and production improvements. However, "its continued existence should be countenanced until more fundamental policies begin to solve the problem."

Most significant political statement in the agricultural chapter is the veiled assurance on benefit payments as follows:

"Until the basic policies, here suggested, begin to register their effect, the necessity of some form of direct subsidy to agriculture to secure effective parity and control the impact of surpluses upon farm prices must be recognized."

Business.

THE committee endorses government regulation of business, but reminds the world that business is not "anti-social," as claimed by the New Deal, and so should be given ample freedom to take risks.

"The purpose of government intervention," says the report, "should be to make the American economy of free enterprise work, not to replace it with something else. In the face of mounting evidence that the temper and purpose of New Deal leadership, in its relation to business, have repressed rather than released the creative energies of the nation's enterprise, the temptation in many quarters has been to demand a moratorium on all business reform."

The committee warns against such a stand. Business should be regulated, consumers protected, small and new business aided, but by "rational rule" and by letting business know exactly what the government seeks to do.

* * *

Finances.

NEW DEAL fiscal policies and its vast expenditures make the solution of U. S. finances extremely difficult, but as a start the GOP committee recommends:

(1) Eliminate tax exemptions on all future issues of federal, state and municipal securities, (2) reduce the higher individual surtaxes, repeal the capital stock and excess profits taxes, and increase rates in the middle brackets, (3) substantially reduce government expenditures, and (4) declare a determination to return to the gold standard, the time and conditions to be fixed by a commission working with congress. This last is another pet Hoover plank.

Social Security.

UNEMPLOYMENT insurance and old-age pensions, the committee declares, should be on a pay-as-you-go basis with both worker and employer contributing. There is little criticism of the New Deal Social Security Act, but a recommendation that it be extended to farm labor, domestic help and other groups now excluded—which Roosevelt originally asked congress to do.

The report also advocates government aid in promoting a "healthier America," but is very much against having the government enter the "field of actual medical care, remedial as well as preventive, for people, either individually or as groups."

The committee recommends federal grants-in-aid to local and state health units, plus a national health program by the government, medical profession and voluntary social groups, and the promotion of voluntary non-profit health and hospital insurance organizations.

CHAPTER XIII

In the vague dimness, Claire was able to guess that Rene had set his plane down in a clearing, as in the distance, against the skyline, she could make out the ragged edges of a solid row of trees.

Idling down his plane, Rene leaped to the ground and in a moment was helping Claire from her seat.

"Slip out of the 'chute and leave it in the ship," he whispered. "Be sure to take your gas mask. Berlin is about thirty miles away, and there is a main road less than a mile from here. A bus line runs there that will take you right into the center of town. If you don't know the city, buy a street map and study it, and then throw it away so it won't be found on you in case you have any trouble. Understand?"

"Yes," she whispered.

"This is a clearing in a heavy woods," he hurried on. "You're near Pichelsdorf. It's too late now to get a bus into town. I'd advise you to hide out in the woods for the rest of the night, and as soon as it's daylight start walking. It's straight ahead from here. You'll find a path through the woods, which will bring you out onto the main road. Look about you closely as you go, as you'll have to find your way back here for me to pick you up. If there is any change, you will be notified. You'd better run now for the protection of the woods and stay there till it gets light."

He leaned over suddenly and kissed her on the lips.

"Good-bye, my dear, and good luck. Don't be frightened—just keep your head, and you'll be all right. Au revoir."

She started on a run straight ahead, one hand thrust out in front of her in case she should encounter anything.

She heard Rene's plane roar as he speeded up the motor, and then the plane was racing down the field.

Suddenly she heard the sound of motors high overhead, and then the sharp report of anti-aircraft guns. The flashes were beyond the woods, but she could see their reflection against the black sky.

Between the sharp reports of the anti-aircraft guns, she heard the hollow rattle of machine guns high overhead. Instinctively she threw herself flat on the ground. There must be a dogfight going on almost directly above her. She breathed a prayer that Rene would not be sighted—that somehow he would slip away and wing his way swiftly back to the safety of the Allied lines.

She had a momentary fear that he might be sighted and shot down by a French or an English plane, but then realized that in the darkness the Nazi insignia on his ship could not be seen and unless he got caught in the middle of a dogfight, there was slight danger of his coming to grief. His chief peril would be motor failure, and that was scarcely worth worrying about. It was different now from flying in the first World war when it was almost an epochal event for a ship to make 200 miles without running out of fuel or collapsing under the strain.

The salvos from the anti-aircraft batteries stopped as suddenly as they had started, and she assumed, as she got to her feet, that the raid—if it was a raid—was over. She wondered whether the Nazis hadn't mistaken a cruising air fleet of their own for a squadron of enemy planes.

She walked slowly on and soon reached the fringe of trees. Although she had matches in her purse, plain sulphur matches, she didn't dare to light one to try to find the path Rene had told her about. After stumbling into first one tree and then another she finally decided it would be wiser to stay where she was until it was light enough to find the path. If she wandered around in the dark, she would lose her sense of direction entirely and if she took the wrong path, there was no telling where she would land.

She found a small hillock of grass and settled herself as comfortably as she could. Strangely enough, despite her danger—in the midst of enemy country, and not knowing what moment some one might come to the clearing and discover her—she was very tired.

The nervous strain she had been under since Bill's disappearance hadn't been helped much by the nerve-wracking flight halfway across Germany, and she started nodding sleepily. She caught herself several times, rubbed her eyes with her knuckles and resolved that she would stay wide awake. She told herself it might be fatal if she didn't.

But her body was weaker than her will power, and it slowly relaxed as she slumped into a sound sleep.

Terror seized her when she awoke to find the jet darkness of the night had turned to a dull gray. She tried to get quickly to her feet, but her muscles were cramped and it took several minutes of rubbing legs and ankles before she could stand without prickly pains shooting through her.

She glanced at her watch and was relieved to see that it was only 6:30. She was farther north than Paris and dawn came later here. Claire glanced about, and the path which had proved so elusive in the darkness was the matter of only a few yards away from where she had slept.

Looking carefully around and seeing nothing, she cautiously started down the path through the woods. It was a winding path but she knew that its general direction was north from the clearing. It was much darker among the trees, but enough light filtered through for her to find her way, and after nearly half an hour of careful walking she saw the trees thinning out in front of her. She slowed her pace and before emerging from the woods looked carefully out in every direction.

Ahead, about a quarter of a mile, she could see the concrete strip of a main highway, and she walked in that direction.

Reaching the road, she turned in the direction she knew Berlin was, and saw a clump of trees dotted by spires, indicating a small village not far distant. She started in that direction and had gone no more than two hundred yards when she heard the roar of a bus on the road behind her.

Frantically Claire gestured for the driver to stop and when he pulled his heavy vehicle up, she clambered aboard.

"Berlin," she told the man and produced a ten-mark note.

"Three marks, Fraulein," the driver said. He was elderly, obviously beyond regular military age.

Claire breathed easier when he had given her change, and settled back in a seat. She had glanced casually about the bus when she entered but aside from two men, dressed in rough working clothes, and a woman carrying a large basket which she kept carefully on her knees, there were no other passengers.

At the village the bus paused for several minutes, and Claire was nervous when the driver disappeared into a building.

"Did he suspect her?" "Was he calling the police?" were questions which rushed through her mind. By a tremendous effort, she controlled her feelings outwardly and pretended to be interested in the dozen or more passengers who climbed aboard.

Finally, the driver reappeared—alone—and after he had collected tickets and fares from the new passengers, the bus lurched onward toward Berlin. Claire could scarcely believe she actually was in the heart of Germany, each passing minute bringing her closer and closer to the man she loved—Bill Cameron. Where was he? Was he still safe? Would she be able to find him—give him the message that had been entrusted to her?

The bus was stopping more frequently now. Men in uniforms of various sorts were among the passengers, but they seemed intent on their newspapers or on pamphlets they drew from their pockets. They paid not the slightest attention to the girl who was quaking with fear as she shrank down in her seat.

It was a little after eight o'clock when the bus finally rolled into the heart of Berlin and drew to a stop at Unter den Linden and Friedrich strasse.

Claire had been in Berlin that summer with Bill Cameron and they had had rooms at a hotel near where she alighted from the bus. The German diplomatic corps at that time had done everything possible to make their stay pleasant. Tours and trips about the city had been arranged for her while Cameron was attending conferences, and there had been constant entertaining for both of them after hours.

Claire hoped that she would be lucky enough to avoid running into the many persons she had met then or, if she did, they would not identify her as the American girl who purposely spoke German very badly when she was with them. This was at Cameron's suggestion, on the theory that she might hear things not intended for her ears if it were thought she had merely a smattering of the language. She had picked up several bits of information at that, which helped him considerably in his negotiations.

Claire had learned the downtown district of Berlin fairly well during her previous stay, and unhesitatingly turned south when she alighted from the bus. She didn't know exactly where Jaeger strasse was, but she found it after a walk of only four blocks, and had little difficulty in finding Frau Weber's shop at the address that Yorke had given her. The door was securely locked, and repeated knocking brought no response. She would have to return later.

Nearby at a small restaurant, she ordered rolls and chocolate, and had a bad half minute when she almost asked for coffee—something that was then being rationed so carefully that it couldn't be bought in any restaurant.

She'd have to be very careful—watch every word she uttered—never make one false move.

Shopping Around...

With MARIANNE

IF YOU'RE getting tired of plain colors and can't get very excited about floral prints, you'll be delighted to know that checks are going to be very popular during the early spring season. . . . While shopping yesterday, I saw a black and white checked crepe dress that was smart with red buttons on the tailored bodice and white pique piping at the neckline—a wide red belt fastened with a black buckle, and the bright red bolero jacket is trimmed with black buttons like the red ones on the dress. . . . Another black and while checked frock has the new pockets on the hipline—these are edged with white pique, while black buttons and a red, black and white belt also trim the dress.

Marianne

Checks have also been combined to good advantage in suits for early spring. . . . These have black skirts with black and white checked jackets—one style has a tiny vest tacked to the side seams of the jacket, while the jacket of another suit has black revers to match the skirt and a white chiffon scarf to relieve the severity.

* * *

Local shops are featuring navy blue jacket frocks now too.... One combines a pocketed hipline on a tailored dress with a long-sleeved bolero to match—and both are trimmed with navy grosgrain ribbon. . . . Yellow is one of the leading colors for spring, and when used with blue, the effect is very pleasing—yellow wool pipes the neckline and the "hip" pockets, and a bolero of the yellow wool complements the dress—it is fashioned with wrist-length sleeves, zipper closing and quilted trim.

IS YOUR winter coat beginning to look drab? Then you'll be amazed at the wonders a bright new hat can do for it . . . The smartest ones being shown just now are called kilties—they are made of soft fuzzy felt in four attractive sport styles . . . They come in pastel shades of yellow, pink and blue as well as white—and all of them have a fine hairline plaid design and ribbon of contrasting colors.

For the more dressy occasion, those perky little hats of multi-colored braided straw will lend dash to any costume. . . . One small hat of this straw is trimmed with a grosgrain ribbon bow—while other styles combine flat sailor brims with harmonizing grosgrain ribbon crowns.

* * *

COLOR really predominates in the new spring costume jewelry—with fiesta shades 'way out in front . . . Gourds, leaves and opaque-bubbles in bright shades of red, yellow and blue, turquoise, coral and cyclamen can be purchased in bracelets, necklaces and clips on harmonizing catalyn chains. . . . Shot beads have also been used to make attractive necklaces and bracelets—the small beads are combined in 15 strands of plain pastels or multicolors, while the larger shots, in brighter colors, have ten draped strands . . . Wooden necklaces, bracelets and clips in blond and light brown shades are also smart—carved in the shapes of leaves acorns, hearts and keys on linked wooden, catalyn and leather chains.

* * *

Lapel gadgets will add style to most any suit or dress, if you're careful in your selections. . . . And with all the gadgets now on display in the downtown stores, it shouldn't be difficult for you to choose just the right thing for most any costume. . . . Graceful flowers enameled in soft pastels with gold leaves and stems are attractive for dressy suits and frocks—as are birds, flowers and fish of German silver, brightened with colored studs. . . . For the more tailored sport costumes, however, Mexican figures and comic strip characters in brightly painted wood or catalyn lend the proper gay note.

* * *

OTHER touches of color in a costume may be gained through those new, wide grosgrain belts, which have hipline pockets attached—these come in red, turquoise and rose. . . . Colored purses of sculptured and quilted calf, suede trimmed with grosgrain ribbon in all the new bright and pastel shades, as well as black patent bags, add a gay note of harmony or contrast (whichever you prefer) to any costume.

Note: The styles described above are available in Mansfield shops. You can learn where they may be obtained if you will telephone Marianne at The News-Journal between 1 and 2:30 p m.—Canal 4251.
